HESSE-DARMSTADT

Founded by the youngest of Philipp I's four sons upon the death of their father in 1567, Hesse-Darmstadt was one of the two main branches of the family which survived past the beginning of the 17th century. The Countship of Hanau-Lichtenberg was acquired through marriage when the male line of that principality failed in 1736. Ludwig X was forced to cede that territory to France in 1801. In 1803, Darmstadt acquired part of the Palatinate, the city of Friedberg, part of the city of Mainz, and the Duchy of Westphalia in a general settlement with France. The Landgrave was elevated to the status of Grand Duke in 1806 and reacquired Hesse-Homburg. In 1815 the Congress of Vienna awarded Hesse-Darmstadt the city of Worms and all of Mainz. These were relinquished, along with Hesse-Homburg, to Prussia in 1866 and Hesse-Darmstadt was called just Hesse from 1867 onwards. Hesse became part of the German Empire in 1871, but ceased to exist as a semi-sovereign state at the end of World War I.

Note: In 1636 Frankfurt and Nassau finished the cooperation with the union of 1623 because of bad quality of product from the mint at Mainz. Mainz and Hesse-Darmstadt continued with the cooperation until 1639. So it is likely that this Pfennig was minted for the same reason after 1636.

HESSE-HOMBURG

Located in west central Germany, Hesse-Homburg was created from part of Hesse-Darmstadt in 1622. The landgraviate had six villages, along with Homburg (today Bad Homburg), and is mostly known for its famous landgrave, Friedrich II. Commander of the Brandenburg cavalry, Friedrich II (with the silver leg) won the Battle of Fehrbellin in 1675. Hesse-Homburg was mediatized to Hesse-Darmstadt during 1801-15, after which it acquired full sovereignty once again, along with the lordship of Meisenheim. The Homburg line became extinct in 1866, and along with Hesse-Darmstadt, was annexed by Prussia.

HESSE-MARBURG

When Hesse was divided among four brothers in 1567, one line of landgraves became centered on Marburg, 45 miles southwest of Cassel. Failing to provide any offspring to continue the line after one ruler, Hesse-Marburg reverted to Hesse-Cassel in 1604.

HILDESHEIM

BISHOPRIC

A bishopric located in Westphalia, about 18 miles southeast of Hannover, was established in 822. The first mint was installed in the Mundburg Castle c. 977. Hildesheim coins were minted there although the bishopric didn't legally receive the mint right until 1054. There was no episcopal coinage during most of the 16th century, the first being produced only during the reign of Ernst of Bavaria. In 1803 it was secularized and assigned to Prussia. From 1807-1813 it formed part of the Kingdom of Westphalia and in 1813 was given to Hannover.

RULERS
Ernst of Bavaria, 1573-1612
Ferdinand of Bavaria, 1612-50
Maximilian Heinrich of Bavaria, 1650-88
Jobst Edmund von Brabeck, 1688-1702

FREE CITY

The town of Hildesheim grew up around the seat of the bishopric and was made a free imperial city in the mid-13th century. The first civic coinage was struck in 1428 and continued more or less continually until the second half of the 18th century. The last silver coins were struck for the city in 1764 and copper coinage was last produced in 1772. Hildesheim came under the control of Prussia in 1803 and like the bishopric, became part of the Kingdom of Westphalia 1807-13. It was awarded to the Kingdom of Hannover in 1813 and reverted to Prussia when the latter absorbed Hannover in 1866.

HOHENLOHE

A countship located in the vicinity of Uffenheim in Franconia and originally centered on the village and castle of present-day Hohlach. The ruling family derived its name from the placename and has been traced back as far as the 10th century. The counts gradually acquired various territories between Offenheim to Bad Mergentheim and beyond that became the basis for the many branches of the dynasty. The first of these was Weikersheim with its castle overlooking the confluence of the Vorbach with the Tauber River. In 1472, the surviving elder branch of counts was divided into Hohenlohe-Weikersheim and Hohenlohe Neuenstein. The former became extinct in 1545 and its lands reverted to Hohenlohe-Neuenstein, which itself was divided once again into Hohenlohe-Neuenstein-Neuenstein (Protestant) and Hohenlohe-Neuenstein-Waldenburg (Catholic) in 1551. Hohenlohe-Neuenstein-Neuenstein was further divided in 1610 (see) and Hohenlohe-Neuenstein-Waldenburg underwent the same process in 1600 with the establishment of Hohenlohe-Waldenburg-Pfedelbach, Hohenlohe-Waldenburg-Schillingsfürst and Hohenlohe-Waldenburg-Waldenburg. See the sections under each of these branches for the subsequent history of each. The lands of all branches of Hohenlohe were mediatized in 1806 and passed to Bavaria and Württemberg.

JOINT COINAGE

From 1594 to 1622 a joint coinage was issued for all the counts of the various branches of Hohenlohe. See under each branch for names and dates of individual rulers.

HOHENLOHE-WALDENBURG-SCHILLINGSFURST

In 1600 the Pfedelbach, Waldenburg and Schillingsfürst lines of Hohenlohe were established from Waldenburg, the Catholic branch of the family. Waldenburg became extinct in 1679 with all lands passing to Schillingsfurst. The count gained the rank of prince in 1744, but the line only lasted until mediatization in 1806.

HOHENZOLLERN

The origins of this family, a branch of which produced the later rulers of Brandenburg-Prussia and the Kaisers of Imperial Germany, supposedly date from the 9th century. The castle of Zollern was first built in that time by Count Tassilo in Swabia, on a high hill just south of the town of Hechingen. The earliest historical member of the family was Burkhard, who died in 1040. His descendant, Count Friedrich I (III), obtained the burgraviate of Nürnberg by marriage and ruled there 1192-1200. The two sons of Friedrich I divided the family holdings, with Friedrich II succeeding in Swabia, while the younger Konrad III ruled in Nürnberg and the Franconian territories of the family. It was from the latter that the lines of Brandenburg-Prussia, Ansbach and Bayreuth descended. The elder line in Hohenzollern underwent several divisions in subsequent years, the most important having occurred in 1576, when Hohenzollern-Hechingen, Hohenzollern-Haigerloch and Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen were established. Haigerloch soon died out, but the other two continued into the 19th century.

HOHNSTEIN

(Hohenstein)

The counts of Hohnstein, based in the Harz Mountains of central Germany, about 15 miles northeast of Nordhausen, descended from a line dating to the mid-12th century. With the death of Ernst VII in 1593, the dynasty became extinct and the lands were divided among several ecclesiastical and secular principalities. Eventually, most of the territories of Hohnstein went to Brandenburg-Prussia and Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel. Some of these princes struck coinage for Hohnstein.

RULERS
Ernst IV, 1454-1508
Heinrich XIII, 1508-1530
  Ernst V, 1508-1552
  Johann IV, 1508-1552
Volkmar Wolfgang I, 1552-1580
  Wilhelm III, 1552-1554
  Eberwin, 1552-1560
  Ernst VI, 1552-1562
Ernst VII, 1580-1593
Friedrich Ulrich, Herzog von Braunschweig-Wolfenbüttel, 1613-1634
Johann VIII, Graf von Sayn-Wittgenstein, 1634-1657
Gustav, Graf von Sayn-Wittgenstein, 1657-1701
NOTE: For coinage after 1634, see Sayn-Wittgenstein-Hohnstein.

HOYA

The counts of Hoya trace their descent from one Heinrich von Stumpenhausen, who conquered the castle of Hoya in the lordship of Hodenburg in 1204. He henceforth called himself after the name of that castle on the Weser River, 23 miles (38 km) southeast of Bremen. In 1324, Hoya was divided into the Lower Countship (Enterigau) centered on Castle Hoya in the north and the Upper Countship (Steiringau) with its seat at Nienburg, in the south. The line in Hoya became extinct in 1503 and the countship was reunited. The younger line also died out in 1582 and most of Hoya went to Brunswick-Calenberg, thereafter to Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel. A small portion of Hoya was joined to Hesse-Cassel. Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel struck special coins for Hoya during the early period of the Thirty Years' War.

INGOLSTADT

A city in Upper Bavaria (Oberbayern) on the Danube at the junction with the Schutter, some 45 miles (75km) north of Munich. When Bavaria was divided in 1375 by the sons of Stephan I, Ingolstadt became the capital of one of the three duchies, but lost that status when the line died out in 1334 and the territory went to the Munich line (see Bavaria). A university was founded in the city in 1472, but was transferred to Landshut in 1800 and then to Munich in 1826. The city was besieged by Gustavus Adolphus in 1632-33 and obsidional coinage was produced to meet the emergency.

ISENBURG

The lands of the counts of Isenburg lay on both sides of the Main River to the east of Frankfurt. The dynasty traces its lineage back to the 10th century and began issuing coins in the mid-13th century. The county underwent many divisions in the Middle Ages, but by the early 17th century only one dominant branch was producing coins. This was Isenburg-Birstein, divided once again into Isenburg-Offenbach-Birstein and Isenburg-Büdingen in 1635. The latter was further divided into four branches in 1673/1687 and two of the substrata became extinct in 1725 and 1780 respectively. Isenburg-Offenbach-Birstein was raised to the rank of prince in 1744 and all other branches had to relinquish their sovereignty to his descendant in 1806. The latter lost his sole leadership in 1813 because he sided with Napoleon and the lands of Isenburg-Offenbach-Birstein were mediatized to Hesse-Darmstadt in 1815. The subdivisions of Isenburg-Büdigen did not issue a regular coinage, but struck the series of the quasi-official snipe hellers during the 19th century.

ISNY

This south German city, some 17 miles NE of Lindau and the shore of the Bodensee (Lake Constance), is first mentioned in the 11th century. It acquired its imperial city status from Emperor Karl IV in 1365 and the mint right in 1507 from Maximilian I. A regular coinage began the following year and continued, on-and-off, until the early 18th century. The city was acquired by Württemberg in 1803 and lost its position as a free city.

JAGERNDORF

A duchy in Silesia, centered on the town of the same name, which is located on the Oppa (Opava) River, some 14 miles (23km) northwest of Troppau. From earliest recorded times, Jägerndorf had been part of Silesia, but passed to the Duchy of Troppau in 1340. When Troppau was divided by sons of a duke who had died in 1366, Jägerndorf together with Ratibor formed one of the subdivisions. Jägerndorf was occupied by Hungary 1483-93, then by Bohemia through the agency of Johann von Schellenberg in 1493. Johann's son, George, who ruled Jägerndorf on behalf of Bohemia from 1506 to 1523, sold the duchy to Georg the Pious, Margrave of Brandenburg-Ansbach in the latter year. Jägerndorf was briefly in the hands of the Elector of Brandenburg and also for a short period was obtained by the Habsburgs. It shortly thereafter passed to the princes of Liechtenstein who ruled it until the end of World War I in 1918.

JEVER

A lordship lying on the North Sea coast, Jever's earliest coinage dates from the late 10th and early 11th centuries. For several centuries Jever experienced political disintegration until one powerful lord united the district in the early 15th century. The noble line fell extinct in 1575 and Jever passed by marriage to Oldenburg, then successively to Anhalt-Zerbst in 1667, Russia in 1793, Holland in 1807, Russia again in 1813, and finally to Oldenburg again in 1818.

The coinage struck for Jever under Oldenburg can be distinguished by prominence given to the Jever arms - a lion rampant to the left usually in a central shield imposed over the four-fold arms of Oldenburg and Delmenhorst.

JULICH

The capital city of the duchy of Jülich is located on the Roer River 16 miles northeast of Aachen near the border with the Netherlands. The Roman town of Juliacum became the seat of the counts of Jülich by the mid-9th century and that of the dukes beginning in 1356. Three major sieges took place against the city and the first occurred in 1543. In the early 17th century Jülich was besieged twice, in 1610 by Prince Moritz of Nassau-Orange (1618-1625) and in 1621-22 by Count Henry of 's-Heerenberg (d.1638).

CITY

SIEGE COINAGE
1543

Upon the extinction of the ruling family of Geldern (Guelders in the Netherlands along the Lower Rhine) in 1538, Duke Wilhelm V of Jülich-Cleve-Berg attempted to add that territory to his realm. Emperor Karl V also claimed Geldern and the Habsburg government in the Netherlands sent a force to seize the disputed duchy in 1541. The imperial troops laid siege to Wilhelm's capital city in 1543 and caused the issuance of a necessity coinage. When Jülich capitulated, Duke Wilhelm was forced to accept the Treaty of Venlo, by which he agreed to imperial occupation of his castles and strongholds, as well as a restoration of the Catholic faith in his territories. Geldern was ceded to the Emperor as a final result of the siege.

The design used to stamp the obsidional coinage of 1543 consisted of the rampant lion left dividing 4 - 3, all in an ornately-shaped shield.

1610

Obsidional coinage issued by Baron Johann von Rauschenberg, governor of Jülich on behalf of the Hapsburg Archduke Leopold, imperial administrator for the disputed lands of Jülich, Cleve, Berg, Mark, and Ravensberg. Most, if not all, of the following items were fashioned or cut from silver or gold dinnerware, some hammered flat and countermarked with identifying stamps and value stamps. There are two types of identifying stamps:

A - in oval, a crowned R (Rauschenberg) above 16L10 (L = Leopold).

B - in oval, V/I. R/1610 (Johann von Rauschenberg).

JULICH-BERG

The earliest counts of Jülich, located between Aachen and the Rhine (see Jülich, City), are known from the mid-9th century. Successive counts added territories to the nucleus of their domains and obtained the mint right in 1237. Count Wilhelm V (1328-62) attained the rank of Margrave in 1336 and was raised to that of Duke as Wilhelm I in 1356. His son, Wilhelm II, married Maria of Geldern, thus enlarging the duchy greatly. His younger brother married the heiress of Berg (along the east bank of the Rhine) and Ravensberg (in Westphalia). Geldern passed to the Egmont family in 1423 for lack of legitimate heirs in the Jülich line. Jülich itself fell to the younger branch of the family in Berg-Ravensberg in the same year. From this time on, the duchy was known as Jülich-Berg. Wilhelm IV died in 1511 without a male heir and his daughter, Maria, had married Duke Johann III of Cleve the year before. In 1521, the three duchies were united as Jülich-Cleve Berg (see). Following the great controversy after the death of Duke Johann Wilhelm in 1609, Jülich and Berg were occupied jointly by Brandenburg and Pfalz-Neuburg. The latter acquired Jülich-Berg outright in 1624, while Cleve, Mark and Ravensberg went to Brandenburg-Prussia. The dual duchy remained with the Wittelsbachs of the Palatinate until 1801, in which year France occupied it. In the peace settlement at the end of the Napoleonic Wars in 1815, Jülich-Berg was given to Prussia.

JULICH-CLEVE-BERG

United by marriage in 1510 and formally constituted as a single entity in 1521, the Duchies of Jülick, Cleve and Berg followed a single path during most of the 16th century. Following the death of the last ruler in 1609, the various territories were divided among rival claimants to the inheritance. See Jülich-Berg for a more complete overview of the history.

RULER
Johann Wilhelm I, 1592-1609

KEMPTEN

The site of Kempten, 81 miles southwest of Munich, predates the Roman town known as Cambodunum. A monastery was founded there as early as 752 from St. Gall (in present-day Switzerland), but the famous abbey was refounded in 773/4 by Hildegard, wife of Charlemagne. A town grew up around the abbey and was the site of an imperial mint from the early 13th century. In 1289 Kempten became a free imperial city and in 1348 the abbot became a prince of the empire. The city obtained the right to mint coins in 1510 and struck a series from 1511 until 1730. The abbots struck coins in the 12th and 13th centuries, then again from 1572 infrequently until 1748. In 1803 the abbey was secularized and, together with the city, was joined to Bavaria.

KNYPHAUSEN

The district of Knyphausen was located in northwestern Germany in East Friesland. Local nobility ruled from the 14th century until 1623 when it was sold to Olden- burg. It became autonomous in 1653 and was acquired through marriage to the Bentinck family in 1733. Coins were struck c. 1800. It was claimed by both Anhalt and Oldenburg, and the arms of Knyphausen appear on coins of both places.

KOLLN

(Cöln)

Originally a separate settlement on the River Spree just southeast of medieval Berlin when first mentioned in 1238, Kölln has been over the centuries absorbed by the great capital city. It was early on the site of a chief mint for the Brandenburg margraves, but also had a short-lived copper coinage during the opening era of the Thirty Years' War.

LANDAU

First mentioned in 1106, this city in Bavaria was 30 miles southwest of Mannheim. A monastery was founded there in 1276 and it became an imperial free city in 1291. It was occupied by the French from 1680-1815. Two sieges took place, 1702 and 1713, during both of which coins were struck.

With Prince Charles Alexander of Württemberg as commander, Landau was besieged from June 25, 1713 to August 20, 1713, by the French, commanded by the Duc de Villars.

LAUENBURG

The line of rulers of this Saxon duchy became extinct in 1689 and passed to Brunswick-Lüneburg-Celle, then to Brunswick-Lüneburg-Calenberg-Hannover in 1705. After the Napoleonic Wars, Lauenburg went to Prussia in 1813, to Denmark in 1814, and was regained by Prussia as part of the latter's annexation of Holstein in 1864. The Brunswick duches struck special coins for Lauenburg. See Saxe-Lauenburg for coinage prior to 1689.

LEININGEN

The counts, landgraves and princes of Leiningen trace their origin back to early 12th century Alsace. Over the ensuing centuries, through marriage and division, Leiningen became a house of numerous lines with far-flung possessions situated from southwest Germany, throughout the Rhineland, Hesse and Bavaria. Only several of the Leiningen branches struck coins in the 17th and 19th centuries.

LEININGEN-DAGSBURG-FALKENBURG

This line of counts was founded upon the division of Leiningen-Dagsburg-Hartenburg in 1541. The lands of Leiningen-Dagsburg-Falkenburg were located west of Koblenz near the present-day border with Belgium. Its possessions were annexed by France in 1801.

LEUCHTENBERG

The earliest Landgraves of Leuchtenberg are mentioned from the mid-12th century based in their castle of the same name, located in northern Bavaria about 39 miles (65 kilometers) north of Regensburg. The landgrave received the mint right in 1360 and acquired the Countship of Hals near Passau in 1375. A separate line was then established in Hals but fell extinct in 1443 and reverted to Leuchtenberg. The landgrave was put under the imperial ban during the years 1505 to 1508 and, as a consequence, was forced to give up hals to Bavaria in 1517. The line of landgraves fell extinct in 1646 with all its titles and scattered territories passing to Bavaria through the marriage of Mathilde, the aunt of the last landgrave, and Albrecht VI, the younger brother of Duke Maximilian I.

LEUTKIRCH

This free imperial city in Swabia, about 15 miles north of Isny, is mentioned in the mid-8th century. Its imperial city status dates from the 13th century. Leutkirch rarely exercised its right of coinage, preferring rather to join other Swabian towns in currency unions.

LIEGNITZ

Liegnitz is located in Silesia, 40 miles (67 kilometers) west-northwest of Breslau, and was one of the two seats for the dukes of Silesia-Liegnitz-Brieg (see). The town was given the mint right by Duke Ludwig III (1420-41) in 1425 and a series of small denominations ensued. Liegnitz passed to the Habsburgs, along with the rest of the duchy, in 1675.

LIMPURG

The lords of Limpurg, near Hall in northern Württemberg, were the hereditary cupbearers of the Empire and traced their line back to the late 10th century. Two branches were established at Gaildorf and Speckfeld in 1414, both of which underwent many dividions during the ensuing centuries. Various members of the family gained prominence as churchmen and struck coins in those capacities. Only two issues are known for Limpurg proper.

LINDAU

A city located on the northeast shore of Lake Constance, Lindau dates from the early 9th century. After acquiring the status of free imperial city in 1274, a local coinage was produced for Lindau on and off during the next 5 centuries. During the Kipper Period of the Thirty Years' War, a variety of coins from South German issuing authorities were counterstamped with the linden tree symbol of Lindau. These are not listed here. In 1732 a joint coinage with the towns of Isny, Wangen, and Leutkirch was struck. After the Napoleonic Wars, in 1805, Lindau was made a part of Bavaria.

LIPPE

The lords of Lippe first established their territory in Westphalia to the west of the Weser River in the early 12th century. The dynasty acquired the rank of count in the early 16th century. In 1613 Lippe was divided into four branches: Lippe-Detmold, Lippe-Sternberg (extinct in 1620 and reverted to Detmold), Lippe-Bracke, and Lippe-Alverdissen. The latter inherited half of the county of Schauenburg (Schaumburg) and founded the line of Schaumburg-Lippe in 1640 (q.v.). Lippe-Brucke became extinct in 1790 and its possessions fell back to the senior branch of Lippe-Detmold, which lasted into the 20th century.

LIPPE-DETMOLD

After the division of 1613, the Counts of Lippe-Detmold, as the senior branch of the family, ruled over the largest portion of Lippe (see), a small patrimony in northwestern Germany. In 1620, Lippe-Sternberg became extinct and its lands and titles reverted to Lippe-Detmold. The younger brother of Hermann Adolf founded the line of Lippe-Sternberg-Schwalenberg (Biesterfeld) in 1652, which lasted into the 20th century. In 1720, the count was raised to the rank of prince, but did not use the title until 1789. Lippe joined the North German Confederation in 1866 and became part of the German Empire in 1871. Prince Alexander was declared insane and placed under a regency during his entire reign. There ensued a ten-year testamentary dispute between the Lippe-Biesterfeld and the Schaumburg-Lippe lines over the succession to the childless Alexander - a Wilhelmine cause célèbre. Leopold (V) of the Biesterfeld line gained the principality in 1905, but was forced to abdicate in 1918, at the end of World War I. In 1947, Lippe was absorbed by the German state of North Rhine-Westphalia.

LORRAINE

(Lothringen)

Lorraine was established as a kingdom for Lothaire in the mid-9th century and was a part of the Carolingian Empire. It emerged as a duchy in the early 10th century and eventually became a buffer state between Germany and France. By 955, following several revolts which had their roots in Lorraine, Emperor Otto I (936-73) divided the territory in Lower Lorraine, which later became Brabant, and Upper Lorraine, the region which stretched along the Meuse and Mosel Rivers southwards to Burgundy. It is the latter entity, often associated with Alsace (see), which has come down to modern Europe as Lorraine.

The duchy was often a source of contention between the emperors and the kings of France, especially in the 17th century. France occupied it several times, from 1634-41, 1643-44, 1654-61, and 1673-75, and then again 1690-97. In 1736, Duke Franz III married Maria Theresa, daughter of Emperor Karl VI and reigned as Emperor Franz I (1745-65). He exchanged Lorraine with France at the end of 1736 and received the Grand Duchy of Tuscany as compensation in the following year. The former King of Poland, Stanislaw Leszczinski, succeeded Franz III (I) in Lorraine, but the duchy was finally incorporated into France upon his death in 1766. Along with Alsace, Lorraine was acquired by the German Empire after the defeat of France by Prussia in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71. The Treaty of Versailles returned Alsace and Lorraine to France in 1919.

LOWENSTEIN-WERTHEIM

The countship of Löwenstein was established by a division of the lineage of Calw in northern Württemberg, in 1152. Löwenstein was sold to the Habsburgs in 1281 from which it eventually passed to the Palatinate (Pfalz) in 1441. A new line of counts was established in 1476 from the electoral Palatinate. Wertheim was obtained by marriage in 1600. The division of 1635 resulted in the separation of Löwenstein-Wertheim into 2 branches, Protestant and Catholic.

LUBECK

BISHOPRIC

The bishopric was established at Lubeck ca. 1160. The first coins were struck ca. 1190. The bishops became Protestant during the Reformation. Territories were absorbed into Oldenburg during the reign of the last bishop. All the bishops of Lubeck from 1586 until 1802 were dukes of Schleswig-Holstein-Gottorp.

FREE CITY

Lübeck became a free city of the empire in 1188 and from c. 1190 into the 13th century an imperial mint existed in the town. It was granted the mint right in 1188, 1226 and 1340, but actually began its first civic coinage c.1350. Occupied by the French during the Napoleonic Wars, it was restored as a free city in 1813 and became part of the German Empire in 1871.

LUCKAU

Situated about 45 miles (75 km) south-southeast of Berlin, Luckau was the centrally most important town in Lower Lusatia on the way to Dresden. A mint functioned in the town during the 13th and 14th centuries and a mintmaster is mentioned there in the early 15th century. Luckau produced a series of coins for local use during the early period of the Thirty Years' War.

LUNEBURG

This city 50 miles southeast of Hamburg, chartered in 1247, became a powerful member of The Hanseatic League and received the mint right in 1293. It passed to Hannover in 1705 and to Prussia in 1866. Using a pun on the city name "luna" showed a half moon on larger coins. Lüneburg had a local coinage, which was produced intermittently from 1293 until 1777.

MAGDEBURG

ARCHBISHOPRIC

The small 9th century settlement on the Elbe River, about 85 miles (140 km) west-southwest of Berlin, grew into an important religious and trading center. A convent was established in Magdeburg by Otto the Great (962-73) in 937, while he was still King of the Germans and not yet Emperor. Otto followed this pious act by placing an imperial mint in the town in 942 and facilitated the establishment of an archbishopric there in 968. It was not long before the archbishops were striking coins, in the name of the emperor at first, then in their own names beginning in the late 11th-early 12th century. Archiepiscopal coinage was struck more or less continuously from the late 14th century until 1679. Long under the influence of Brandenburg-Prussia, the Archbishopric of Magdeburg passed, along with the city, into the possession of that powerful state in 1680.

CITY

The city of Magdeburg encompassed the seat of the archbishopric. The town received the mint right in 1479 but had already been striking local coinage in the previous century. Magdeburg was besieged in 1550-1551 and again in 1629, during the Thirty Years' War, leading to interesting obsidional coinages. In 1631 the imperial forces under Tilly burned Magdeburg to the ground causing the deaths of 30,000 inhabitants, an act which shocked all of Europe. The city was rebuilt in 1638 and was absorbed by Brandenburg in 1680. The last city coinage is dated 1682. Magdeburg became a mint for Brandenburg-Prussia (q.v.) beginning in 1683. The city was taken by the French in 1806 and reverted to Prussia in 1814.

MAINZ

Mainz, located on the Rhine 25 miles west of Frankfurt, became an archbishopric in 747. It was a residence and mint of Charlemagne, and the Imperial Mint established then functioned into the 11th century. The archbishops were recognized as presidents of the electoral college and arch-chancellors of the Empire by the Golden Bull of 1356. In 1797, Mainz was ceded to France and in 1801 the French annexed all of the territories on the left bank of the Rhine. The remaining lands were secularized in 1803 and portions were divided between Hesse-Darmstadt, Nassau and Prussia.

Mainz became a Free City of the Empire in 1118 but lost the title in 1163 through an unsuccessful revolt against ecclesiastical authority. The city obtained the mint right in 1420 but rarely availed itself of the privilege. It was occupied by Sweden from 1631 to 1635 during the 30 Years War. Siege coins were struck in 1793 when the French garrison was besieged by the Prussians.

HESSE-DARMSTADT, MAINZ, NASSAU-SAARBRÜCKEN & FRANKFURT AM MAIN

Mainz joined a union with Hesse-Darmstadt, Nassau-Saarbrucken and Frankfurt to strike some minor coins during the Thirty Years' War. Official coinage was to be minted at Frankfurt. Unofficial issues struck by Mainz foiled the union, ending the four-state corroboration in 1636. A two-state union for Hesse-Darmstadt and Mainz continued to mint amended Halbbatzen in Mainz from 1637-1639.

MANSFELD

A small, silver mining state, located between Anhalt and Thuringia. Bracteats were struck c. 1200. The ruling family of Mansfeld was much divided during the 15th and 16th centuries and they were prolific coin issuers during this period. The county of Mansfeld was annexed to Electoral Saxony in 1780 and then passed to Prussia in 1815.

MARK

The countship of Mark was established in the early 13th century in Westphalia, with the capital located in the town of Hamm. Through marriages during the 14th century, Mark inherited the countships of Berg and Cleve. By the late 15th century, those three countships were united with those of Jülich and Ravensberg and all five figured in the succession controversy stemming from the extinction of the ruling line in 1609. Mark, along with Cleve and Ravensberg, went to Brandenburg-Prussia in 1624. Several decades later, the electors/margraves of Brandenburg struck a special local coinage for Mark.

RULERS

Johann Wilhelm, 1592-1609
Georg Wilhelm, Markgraf von Brandenburg, 1619-1640
Friedrich Wilhelm, Markgraf von Brandenburg, 1640-1688

MARSBERG

A town in Westphalia, which is located on the Diemel River west of Warburg. Its origins are obscure, but Marsberg had a mint in the 13th century. During the first half of the 17th century, Marsberg had a local coinage, some issues being struck in the name of the archbishop/elector of Cologne. The town was included in the Kingdom of Westphalia from 1807 to 1813 and passed to Prussia in 1815.

MECKLENBURG

The dukes of Mecklenburg trace their origins from one Niklot, prince of the pagan Slavonic tribe of the Obotrites in the Baltic region, who was killed in battle in 1160 by Duke Heinrich the Lion of Saxony. Niklot's eldest son, Przbislaw II (1160-81), converted to Christianity in 1170 and was made Prince of Meckelnburg, the region in northern Germany lying along the Baltic between Holstein and Pomerania. Mecklenburg was divided in 1227 into the four lines of Mecklenburg, Werle, Rostock and Parchim. The two sons of Heinrich II the Lion (1287-1329), Albrecht II (1329-79) and Johann I (1329-1393), were raised to the rank of duke in 1348 and ruled jointly until 1352, when they divided their land into the Mecklenburg and Stargard branches. The dukes of Mecklenburg had their main seat of power in ruling their domains at the castle in Schwerin, but younger brothers sometimes were granted Güstrow, which they controlled independently of the main line. A completely independent line of Mecklenburg-Güstrow was established in 1610 and became extinct in 1695. The two main lines of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Mecklenburg-Strelitz were founded in 1658.

MECKLENBURG-SCHWERIN

The duchy of Mecklenburg was located along the Baltic coast between Holstein and Pomerania. Schwerin was annexed to Mecklenburg in 1357. During the Thirty Years' War, the dukes of Mecklenburg sided with the Protestant forces against the emperor. Albrecht von Wallenstein, the imperialist general, ousted the Mecklenburg dukes from their territories in 1628. They were restored to their lands in 1632. In 1658 the Mecklenburg dynasty was divided into two lines. No coinage was produced for Mecklenburg-Schwerin from 1708 until 1750. The 1815 Congress of Vienna elevated the duchy to the status of grand duchy and it became a part of the German Empire in 1871 until 1918 when the last grand duke abdicated.

MECKLENBURG-STRELITZ

The duchy of Mecklenburg was located along the Baltic Coast between Holstein and Pomerania. The Strelitz line was founded in 1658 when the Mecklenburg line was divided into two lines. The 1815 Congress of Vienna elevated the duchy to the status of grand duchy. It became a part of the German Empire in 1871 until 1918 when the last grand duke died.

MEMMINGEN

This former free imperial city is located in southern Bavaria, about 35 miles southwest of Augsburg. It is the site of an early church foundation of the mid-8th century, but the town itself is mentioned only from the first part of the 11th century. In 1286, free city status and mint rights were granted.

The town struck bracteates into the 14th century. A local town coinage was also issued in the 17th and early 18th centuries. The city was annexed to Bavaria in 1802.

METZ

BISHOPRIC

The capital of Lorraine (Lothringen), Metz is located 36 miles (60 km) west of Saarbrücken and 80 mi. (132 km) west-northwest of Strasburg in present-day France. It has existed as a place prior to the Roman conquest of Gaul and was named by the Romans Divodurum. It was the site of a bishopric at least from the 4th century which grew in importance in the High Middle Ages. Metz functioned as the location of an imperial mint from the 9th through early 12th centuries and the first coins of the bishops were struck in the mid-10th century. The city was attacked and occupied Metz during 1552 and 1553, at which time the coinage of the bishops began to assume the French model upon forfeiting their rights to the conquerors. The Peace of Westphalia ending the Thirty Years' War in 1648 gave formal recognition to the seizure of the city and the last local coinage was issued around 1660.

CITY

The pre-Roman settlement of Metz was the seat of a bishopric from the 4th century (see) and became a free imperial city in the 13th century. The city was accorded the right to mint its own coins in 1383, which production came to an end after the conclusion of the Peace of Westphalia, the treaty ending the Thirty Years' War in 1648-50. The city and surrounding territory then formally passed to France. The last city coinage was struck in 1650.

CITY ARMS

MINDEN

The town of Minden in Westphalia, some 60 miles east of Osnabruck, was made the seat of a bishopric by Charlemagne in 803. The bishop gained the mint right in 997 and obtained the right to maintain a mint at Eisleben in 1045. Only a small variety of coin types were struck during the first half of the 17th century, most notably the city seige issues of 1634. For the coinage of Bishop Christian, see listings for him under Brunswick-Luneburg-Celle. As part of the Peace of Westphalia ending the Thirty Years' War in 1648, Minden was secularized and handed over to Brandenburg-Prussia. The latter established a mint for the territory in Minden with coins first struck in 1652. From 1807 until 1814, Minden was part of the Kingdom of Westphalia and was returned to Prussia thereafter.

MOMPELGART

(Mömpelgard, Mümpelgard, Montbéliard)

The Countship of Mömpelgart was located southwest of the Rhine, between the County of Burgundy and the Landgraviate of Upper Alsace. Its capital was the town of the same name situated near the confluence of the Allaine and Lisaine Rivers, 36 miles (60 kilometers) northeast of Besançon. When the last count of the old line died without a male heir, the territory and titles passed by way of his daughter Henriette through her marriage in 1408 to Count Eberhard IV of Württemberg (ruled 1417-19). Eberhard's son, Ludwig I (1419-50), inherited Mömpelgart outright when his mother died in 1444. The Countship was ruled from this point by either the Counts (dukes from 1495) of Württemberg themselves or their brothers and cousins until a separate line was established in 1608. When that line became extinct in 1723, the titles and lands reverted to Württemberg. France annexed Mömpelgart in 1796 and all association with Württemberg ended.

MONTFORT

The countship of Montfort was located in the extreme southern part of Württemberg along the northern shore of the Bodensee (Lake Constance) and the area extending southeast of the lake known as the Vorarlberg. The castle of Montfort is situated next to the mint town of Langenargen on the Bodensee between Lindau and Friedrichshafen. The House of Montfort oriinated from the marriage of Hugo I, Count Palatine of Tübingen (1162-82) and Elizabeth, Countess and heir of Bregenz, Montfort and Sigmaringen. Their elder son, Rudolf I (1182-1230), took part of Bregenz and Montfort, thus establishing that line of counts. The sons of Hugo II divided their patrimony, founding separate lines of Montfort and Werdenberg. It was during the 13th century that the counts of Montfort began striking their first coins in the form of bracteats. The next generation again divided the lands into the branches of Montfort-Feldkirch, Montfort-Bregenz and Montfort-Tettnang. Feldkirch fell extinct in 1390 and passed to Austria. The Bregenz line only lasted until 1338 and was reunited to that of Tettnang. In 1353, the two sons of Wilhelm II founded the lines of Montfort-Neu-Bregenz and Montfort-Tettnang. Both branches struck coins, but the latter became extinct in 1574 and the lands and titles reverted to Bregenz, which then took the name of Montfort-Tettnang. Half of the territory of Montfort was sold to Austria in 1523. The last count sold the remainder to Austria in 1780.

MORS

(Moers)

The Countship of Mörs was located along the west bank of the Rhine opposite where the Countship of Cleves and the Duchy of Berg bordered one another north of Düsseldorf. Mörs also owned a small territory around the town of Krefeld. The extent of the entire countship was only about six miles (ten kilometers) in any directions from its principal town of the same name, encompassing an area of 202 square miles (337 square kilometers). The earliest count appeared in the mid-13th century and his descendant married into the family of the counts of Saarwerden in 1376. When the latter line became extinct in the early 15th century, a new line was established from Mörs in 1419. A crisis of the succession occurred in the late 15th century and resulted in rule usurped by Saarwerden. Eventually, the countship devolved to members of several noble families related to Mörs by marriage. Saarwerden itself passed by marriage to Nassau-Saarbrücken in 1527. Finally in 1600, Mörs was inherited by Nassau-Orange and hence to Prussia in 1702.

MUHLHAUSEN IN ALSACE

(Mühlhausen, Mulhouse)

Not to be confused with the Mühlhausen in Thüringen, this town is located in southern Alsace, 58 miles (96 km) south of Strassburg. Mühlhausen was made a free imperial city during the 14th century. The town did not exercise its right to strike coins until the early phase of the Thirty Years' War. At the conclusion of hostilities in 1648, Mühlhausen joined the Swiss Confederation, but was annexed to France in 1798.

MUHLHAUSEN THURINGEN

(in Thuringia)

The city of Mühlhausen is located 20 miles (34km) north-northwest of Gotha and is one of the oldest towns in Thuringia (Thüringen). Walls and fortifications were built during the reign of Emperor Heinrich I (918-36), who gave Mühlhausen a number of special privileges. An imperial mint was located there in the 12th and 13th centuries. After obtaining the right to mint its own coinage, Mühlhausen issued a long series dated from 1496-1767. Mühlhausen came under Prussian rule in 1802, then was dominated by Westphalia from 1807. It was returned to Prussia in 1815, by the terms of the peace which ended the Napoleonic Wars.

MUNSTER

BISHOPRIC

St. Ludger founded the bishopric near the end of the 8th or the beginning of the 9th century in Westphalia. The town of Münster, which means "monastery," grew up around the ecclesiastical establishment (which see). The earliest anonymous coins of the bishopric date from the late 11th century and a long series of issues in the name of the bishops followed over the centuries. In 1802, Münster was secularized and divided among several principalities. Those were soon mediatized and part of the territory went to Hannover. Münster belonged to the Duchy of Berg from 1806 until 1810, then to France until 1814, when it was acquired by Prussia.

During the 16th and 17th centuries treasury tokens, mostly counterstamped with the arms or initials of the current treasurer were issued. These were replaced in the middle of the 17th century by Cathedral coins, showing St. Paul with a sword. They last appeared at the end of the 18th century.

CATHEDRAL CHAPTER

The bursars or treasurers of the Cathedral Chapter of Münster began issuing bursary tokens in the 16th century and then a series of regular coinage in the 17th and 18th centuries. Many of the tokens and coins were countermarked with the arms an/or initials of the canon who was the current treasurer of the chapter. The coins are often found with more than one countermark and they were revalidated by succeeding treasurers. The following are those known from the late 15th century, along with their particular arms used in the countermarks. Each is given a number by which the particular countermarks are identified.

CANONS (Domherren) of the Cathedral Chapter

1. Bernd von Meschede, canon 1456-1503, bursar 1482-84, arms: chevron

2. Johann Valcke III der Jüngere, canon 1486-1510, bursar 1499, arms: falcon to right

3. Dietrich Schade zu Hüsten, canon 1499-1521; bursar 1502, arms: falcon to right

4. Hermann von Hörde, canon 1493-1511, bursar 1508-11, arms: wheel with 5 spokes

5. Wilbrand Korff or Schmising, canon 1514-57, bursar 1514-18, 1549-50, 1552-53, 1556-57, arms: double fleur-de-lis

6. Heinrich Voss von Quakenbrück zu Enniger, canon 1497-1534, bursar 1518, 1526, arms: diagonal bar from upper left to lower right, overlaid with 3 small 4-spoked wheels

7. Georg von Hatzfeld, canon 1513-62, bursar 13-62, bursar 1536-37, 1543, arms: cramp iron

8. Johann I Schenking zu Bevern, canon 1553-69, bursar 1559-62, arms: 3 stout drinking cups

9. Bernhard Korff or Schmising, canon 1552-95, bursar 1562-95, arms: double fleur-de-lis, sometimes with initials 'BS'

10. Engelbert von Brabeck, canon 1582-1620, bursar 1595-1611, arms: 3 wolftraps, 2 above 1, sometimes with initials 'EVB'.

11. Dietrich von Ketteler, canon 1595-1641, bursar 1611-16, arms: pothook

12. Godfried Droste von Vischering, canon 1605-52, bursar 1616-52, arms: blank central shield

13. Goswin Droste zu Vischering, canon 1641-80, bursar 1652-80, arms: blank central shield

14. Johann Wilhelm von Nesselrode, canon 1637-93, bursar 1680-93, arms: crenelated horizontal bar

15. Ferdinand, Graf von Landsberg zu Woklum, canon 1682-1726, bursar 1694-1726, arms: 2 vertical bars

CITY

The town of Münster in Westphalia grew up around the cathedral church after the founding of the bishopric there in the late 8th or early 9th century. As Münster grew in importance, it received a charter near the end of the 12th century. The townspeople continually struggled with the ecclesiastical authorities to regain or maintain their rights. Münster became a leading member of the Hanseatic League during the 13th and 14th centuries, but their control began to ebb in the early years of the Protestant Reformation. During 1534-35, the Anabaptists, lead by Johann of Leyden, established a short-lived "kingdom" in Münster and were ruthlessly suppressed by the Church and Imperial forces. The bishops had lived for many years at Ahaus, 35 miles northwest of Münster because of the frequent strife with the citizens of the city. In 1660, Bishop Christof Bernhard von Galen besieged Münster and after taking away all the city's privileges, made it his principal seat of governance. However, the city continued to strike its own coinage, a series of copper issues begun the 16th century and continued intermittently through the last years of the 18th century.

MUNSTERBERG

The duchy of Münsterberg was located in Silesia south of the city of Breslau. It was united with the duchy of Öls from 1495 until 1569, when Karl II sold Münsterberg to Bohemia from which it eventually was acquired by Austria in 1647. The line of dukes continued to rule in Öls, however. Austria granted the duchy to Count Johann Weikhard of Auersperg in 1653 and made him duke of Münsterberg the next year. Auersperg sold Münsterberg to Prussia in 1793.

MUNSTERBERG-ÖLS

(Münsterberg-Öls)

The duchies of Münsterberg and Öls were located in Silesia, south and north of Breslau respectively. Münsterberg passed to Bohemia in 1462 and was created a separate duchy. Öls was acquired in 1495 and the two became a single entity under a long dynastic succession. The last duke died in 1647 and Münsterberg passed to Austria, while Öls was acquired through marriage by Württemberg (see Württemberg-Öls). In 1653, the count of Auersperg received Münsterberg and was made duke there in 1654 (see Münsterberg).
