MURBACH & LUDERS

Murbach and Lüders were neighboring abbeys in Upper Alsace founded in the 8th century. Almost from their inception they had a common ruling abbot. A local 12th and 13th century coinage preceded the official granting in 1544 of the right to mint coins. Their territories were absorbed into France in 1680, and secularization followed in 1764.

ABBOTS
Johann Rudolf Stör von Störemberg, 1542-1570
Johann Ulrich von Raitenau, 1570-1587
Andreas, Erzherzog von Österreich, 1587-1600
Leopold V, Erzherzog von Österreich, 1601-1625, abdicated (died 1632)
Johann Wilhelm, Erzherzog von Österreich, (1625) 1632-1662
Colomban von Andlau, 1663-1665
Franz Egon, Fürst von Fürstenberg-Heiligenberg, 1665-1682

MINTS
Ensisheim
Gebweiler (French Guebwiller)

ARMS
Murbach – hand raised vertically with first two fingers extended in sign of Episcopal benediction

NASSAU

The Countship of Nassau had its origins in the area of the Lahn of the central Rhineland, with territory on both sides of that river. The first count who attained the title with recognition from the emperor was Walram in 1158. His grandsons, Walram I (1255-88) and Otto I (1255-90), divided their patrimony. Walram claimed the left bank of the Lahn and made Weisbaden his principal seat, whereas Otto took the right bank and ruled from Siegen. Thus, the division of 1255 established the two main lines over the ensuing centuries.

Several times, various branches of the family issued joint coinage, notably in the late 17th and again in the early 19th centuries. Eventually, through extinction of the various lines and the elevation of one ruler to the throne of the Netherlands, all Nassau was reunited under the house of Nassau-Weilburg.

NASSAU-DIETZ

A branch of the Ottonian line established at the division of Nassau-Dillenburg in 1606. The count attained the rank of prince in 1652. Through marriage Nassau-Dietz became related to the House of Orange in the Netherlands and to the royal line in England. When King William III of England died in 1702, the Prince of Nassau-Dietz became Prince of Orange and all Nassau possessions in the Netherlands passed to him. Orange was lost to France in 1713, but the prince became hereditary stadtholder of the Netherlands in 1748. The Prince of Nassau-Dietz gained Fulda in 1803, but had to cede Dietz over to Nassau-Weilburg in 1814, upon becoming the first of the royal house of the Netherlands.

NASSAU-DILLENBURG

One of the divisions of the Ottonian line of the house of Nassau which was founded in 1290 by Heinrich I, son of Otto I (1255-1290). Through the years this branch developed strong ties with the Netherlands. The last duke of Nassau-Dillenburg, Christian, died in 1739 and the lands passed to Nassau-Dietz.

NASSAU-HOLZAPPEL-SCHAUMBURG

This minor branch of Nassau-Dillenburg came into being when the younger brother of the Count of Nassau-Dillenburg married the heiress of the Lordships of Holzappel and Schaumburg in 1653. The couple died without a male heir and Holzappel-Schaumburg passed through the marriage of their daughter to Anhalt-Bernburg-Hoym in 1707.

RULERS
Adolf, 1653-1676
Elisabeth Charlotte, 1676-1707

NASSAU-USINGEN

This branch of the Walramian line was established upon the division of Nassau-Saarbrücken in 1640. The count attained the rank of Prince in 1688 and that of Duke in 1806. Nassau-Usingen became extinct in 1816 and all lands and titles went to Nassau-Weilburg. Only the last ruler issued coins, some in his own name and some jointly with Nassau-Weilburg.

NASSAU-WEILBURG

As a branch of the Walramian line, Nassau-Weilburg was established upon the division of Nassau-Weilburg-Saarbrücken in 1625. The Count was raised to the rank of Prince in 1737. Following the conclusion of the Napoleonic Wars, the ruler became Duke of all Nassau in 1816. Nassau was absorbed by Prussia in 1866 and became the province of Hesse-Nassau when it was joined to Hesse-Cassel.

NASSAU-WEILBURG-SAARBRUCKEN

As a branch of the Walramian line, Nassau-Weilburg was divided several times, first in 1429 when separate countships were established in Saarbrücken and Weilburg. The Nassau-Saarbrücken family came to an end in 1574 and the land and titles were returned to Nassau-Weilburg. New branches of Idstein, Saarbrücken and Weilburg came into existence in 1625. Nassau-Weilburg-Saarbrücken, together with Mainz, Hesse-Darmstadt and Frankfurt am Main, issued some joint coinages during the early part of the 17th century. See Mainz for those issues.

NEURUPPIN

A city in the Rhineland, opposite Düsseldorf across the Rhine, 21 miles (35 kilometers) north-northwest of Cologne. Founded as the Roman Legionary post of Novaesium about 50A.D., it came under the influence of Cologne by the first half of the 7th century. Neuss was also the site of an imperial residence from the later 11th century and obtained considerable local rights during the 13th century. Neuss was part of the territories included in the Archbishopric of Cologne, which allowed the city to issue its own coinage in the 15th and 16th centuries.

MINT OFFICIALS

Johann Bitter von Raesfeld, mintmaster	1561-64
Johann Kreidtfisch, mintmaster	1568-79
Wilhelm Schmitz, warden	1568-?
Heinrich Attendahr, die-cutter	Ca.1577-80
Johann Förster, mintmaster	1579-83

ARMS

Nine small disks or circles, arranged in various patterns, often in combination with or in a several-part shield including the cross of the Cologne archbishopric and the imperial eagle. St. Quirin, the city's patron saint, is also often featured on coins of Neuss.

NORDHAUSEN

Located north of Thuringia (Thüringen) and 25 miles (40km) northeast of Mühlhausen in Thuringia, the town of Nordhausen is found mentioned in records from as early as 874. It was the site of an imperial mint in the 12th and 13th centuries and was designated a free imperial city in 1253. Coinage was struck locally from about this time until nearly the end of the 17th century, but issues were not continuous throughout this period. Nordhausen was annexed at first to Prussia in 1803 and this was made a permanent arrangement in 1813.

NORDLINGEN

The town of Nördlingen, located on the River Eger 75 miles (120 kilometers) northwest of Munich, still has its medieval walls, gates and towers completely preserved. The town is unique in that it sits in the center of a fifteen-mile wide crater formed when a huge meteorite struck the earth in that place fifteen million years ago. First mentioned in a royal charter dated 18 May 898, Nördlingen was assigned to the Bishopric of Regensburg. Emperor Friedrich II (1215-50) acquired the town in 1215 from the bishop and made it an imperial fre city. The present city walls and fortifications were begun by Ludwig III the Bavarian (1314-47) in 1327. An imperial mint operated in the city in the 13th and early 14th centuries, but it was not until 1418 that records show the installation of a mintmaster. In 1431, King Sigismund (1410-37) pawned the imperial mint rights of Nördlingen to Konrad XIII von Weinsberg (1397-1448), the Imperial Chancellor, for 5,450 Gulden. Coins were continually struck in the city in the name of the emperor, even after the mint right passed by inheritance to the Counts of Eppstein-Königstein in December 1503. That line fell extinct in 1535 and the hereditary rights passed to the Counts of Stolberg (see that place for their issues). The coinage in Nördlingen came to an end the following year, however, when the emperor withdrew the privilege. Meanwhile, the city underwent the Reformation in 1522-23. As a result, the Swedish army came to the relief of Nördlingen during the Thirty Years' War. The imperial army besieged the city beginning in August of 1634 and an attempt was made to end that action. A huge battle was fought near Nördlingen on 5-6 September 1634, which resulted in a terrible defeat for the Swedes, thus causing the surrender of the town to King Ferdinand III (later emperor 1637-57), who had led the imperial forces. In 1803, Nördlingen lost its status as a free imperial city and was annexed to Bavaria.

Title Holders of the Mint Rights

Philipp II von Weinsberg, 1448-1503; arms – 3 small shields, 2 above one

Eberhard IV von Eppstein-Königstein, 1503-1535; arms – Eppstein, three chevrons, Münzenberg, divided horizontally, with upper half shaded, Königstein, lion rampant left, Dietz, two lions rampant left, one above the other.

NORTHEIM

(Nordheim)

The city of Northeim, lying 15 miles north of Gottingen in Brunswick-Lüneburg, is known from records dating to the early 11th century. Never gaining status as a Free City of the Empire, Northeim was under the control of the dukes of Brunswick-Lüneburg, who allowed a local coinage to be struck from the 16th century until 1676.

NURNBERG

(Nuremberg)

The Franconian town of Nürnberg, located some 120 miles (200 kilometers) north-northwest of Munich, is known from documents at least as early as 1050. It was already mentioned as the site of an imperial mint in 1062 and its early massive fortifications probably date from this period. The first identifiable coins struck in the imperial mint are from the reign of Emperor Konrad III von Hohenstaufen (1138-52). In 1219, Emperor Friedrich II (1215-50) granted free status to Nürnberg and the mint continued to strike imperial coinage from that date. In 1422, the city received the right to strike its own coins and the first issues in silver appeared two years later. The first gold coins of Nürnberg date from about 1429.

From then onwards, an almost unbroken succession of coinage was produced by the Nürnberg mint. On 15 September 1806, Nürnberg formally became part of Bavaria, although the last city coins were struck in 1807.

OLDENBURG

The countship of Oldenburg was situated on the North Seacoast, to the east of the principality of East Friesland. It was originally part of the old duchy of Saxony and the first recorded lord ruled from the beginning of the 11th century. The first count was named in 1091and had already acquired the countship of Delmenhorst prior to that time. The first identifiable Oldenburg coinage was struck in the first half of the 13th century. Oldenburg was divided into Oldenburg and Delmenhorst in 1270, but the two lines were reunited by marriage five generations later. Through another marriage to the heiress of the duchy of Schleswig and countship of Holstein, the royal house of Denmark descended through the Oldenburg line beginning in 1448, while a junior branch continued as counts of Oldenburg. The lordship of Jever was added to the county's domains in 1575. One of the sons of Johann V, Christoph, studied for the priesthood, but became involved in the War of the Counts against King Christian III of Denmark (1534-59). Christoph issued field campaign money, invoking the name of Christian III's deceased cousin, King Christian II (1513-23). In 1667, the last count died without a direct heir and Oldenburg reverted to Denmark until 1773. In the following year, Oldenburg was given to the bishop of Lübeck, of the Holstein-Gottorp line, and raised to the status of a duchy. Oldenburg was occupied several times during the Napoleonic Wars and became a grand duchy in 1829. In 1817, Oldenburg acquired the principality of Birkenfeld from Prussia and struck coins in denominations used there. World War I spelled the end of temporal power for the grand duke in 1918, but the title has continued up to the present time. Grand Duke Anton Günther was born in 1923.

OPPELN AND RATIBOR

The two duchies of Oppeln and Ratibor in Silesia came into existence in the 12th-13th centuries and produced parallel lines of rulers down to the 16th century. The Ratibor ducal line became extinct in 1522 and the titles passed to Oppeln. The latter died out as well in 1532 and both duchies passed first to Brandenburg, then to a succession of rulers of the Habsburg house, Transylvania and the royal line of Poland. The Habsburgs finally gained sole possession in 1664, but Oppeln-Ratibor went to Prussia in 1740, along with most of the rest of Silesia.

OSEL AND WIEK

(Saare-Lääne)

This bishopric was located on two islands in the Baltic Sea lying just west of the present-day Estonian coast. The chief town of Ösel was Arnsburg and that of Wiek was named Hapsal. A bishopric was established at Arnsburg in 1227 from riga. The islands were part of the territory ruled by the Teutonic Knights (Deutscher Orden) from the 13th century until 1559. The last bishop relinquished his charge to the control of Denmark. Ösel and Wiek came under the control of Sweden in 1645 and then Russia in 1721.

NOTE: This coinage issuer could be placed under Estonia, but should remain under German States as the rulers were German. It was associated with the Teutonic Order of Knights, which is listed under Germany, even though most of the lands it first occupied are in the Baltic region.

OSNABRUCK

BISHOPRIC

A bishopric was established in the town, 30 miles (50 km) northeast of Münster, in 804. The town grew into a small, fortified city around the cathedral and the bishopric expanded its territory north and east of the county of Tecklenburg. The bishops enjoyed the right of coinage from 889 and extended it to their mint in Wiedenbruck (q.v.) in 952. The cathedral chapter issued its own coins in the 17th and 18th centuries. After joining the Hanseatic League independently of the bishops, the city itself minted coins from the mid-16th century until 1805. Both the bishopric and city became part of the kingdom of Hannover in 1803.

OTTINGEN

The counts of Öttingen, with lands in Swabia north of Nördlingen, trace their descent in a long line back to the early 10th century. The counts obtained the right to coin money in 1393. During the Reformation, Öttingen was divided into the Protestant Öttingen-Öttingen and the Catholic Öttingen-Wallerstein lines of counts. Öttingen-Öttingen gained the rank of prince in 1674, but became extinct in 1731 and was divided between Öttingen-Wallerstein-Spielberg and Öttingen-Wallerstein-Wallerstein. In 1602 Öttingen-Wallerstein was split into 3 lines: Öttingen-Wallerstein-Spielberg (prince in 1734, mediatized in the early 19th century), Öttingen-Wallerstein-Wallerstein (prince in 1774, mediatized in the early 19th century) and Öttingen-Wallerstein-Katzenstein, which became extinct in 1798. Only 3 lines actually struck coins during the 16th to 19th centuries.

Most coinages of Öttingen in the 16th century were joint issues among the several branches of the counts.

RULERS

Early arms – dog's head left with 'X' on ear, became crest of helmet

Later arms – St. Andrew's cross with four small helmets in angles, eventually with small shield behind center of cross.

Sometimes both old and new arms are found together in two-fold arms divided vertically.

PADERBORN

One of the principal cities of Westphalia and the seat of a bishopric from its founding by Charlemagne in 795, Paderborn is situated 23 miles (38 kilometers) south-southeast of Bielefeld and about 50 miles (80 kilometers) southeast of Münster. The bishop received the right to strike coins in 1028 and was raised to the rank of Prince of the Empire in about 1100. By the late 12th to early 13th century, the bishops were employing nine different mints in their territories. In 1802, the bishopric was secularized and its domains, as well as the city of Paderborn, were annexed to Prussia. The former bishopric was part of the Kingdom of Westphalia from 1807 to 1813, after which it was returned to Prussia. In addition to the episcopal coinage, the cathedral chapter issued a series of coins in the early 17th century and during the several interregnal years.

The town, and later city, of Paderborn grew up around the cathedral and became a member of the Hanseatic League, but failed to obtain the mint right. Eventually, the townspeople converted to Protestantism and found themselves in opposition to the Catholic bishop. The bishop prevailed and had a series of coins struck for the city in 1605. Paderborn also issued a local coinage during the early period of the Thirty Years' War.

PASSAU

BISHOPRIC

The Bishopric, in Bavaria, near the Austrian border, was established in 738. The bishops obtained the mint right prior to 999 but they originally struck coins jointly at the imperial mint in Passau. Ecclesiastical coinage began in the 12th century. In 1803, Passau was secularized and divided between Bavaria and Salzburg. In 1805 Bavaria absorbed the Salzburg portion.

PFALZ

(Rhenish Palatinate, Rheinpfalz)

The Counts Palatine originally administered and exercised judicial functions over the imperial household of the Holy Roman Emperor, based at the center of Charlemagne's empire, Aachen. They gradually acquired territories in the middle Rhine. From1214 onwards the position was hereditary in the Wittelsbach family, who also controlled Bavaria. For a time the electoral dignity alternated between the Bavarian and Palatinate branches of the Wittelsbach family, until the Golden Bull in1356 settled it upon the Palatinate branch.

When the Protestant nobles in Prague elected Friedrich V, who was also a Protestant, as King of Bohemia in 1618, it precipitated a conflict which became known as the Thirty Years' War. Bohemia had been ruled by the Catholic Habsburg Emperors from Vienna since 1527 and Ferdinand II, was incensed at being rebuffed for the crown. Friedrich V lost his battles with Ferdinand II's armies and had to flee to the Hague and to the protection of his father-in-law, King James I of England. He would forever after be known as "The Winter King" in ridicule of his short reign. As punishment, the electoral dignity was taken from the Pfalz branch of the Wittelsbachs and given to the rival branch, the Catholic Duke of Bavaria. As one of the general conditions set forth in the Peace of Westphalia in 1648-50, an eighth electorship was created for Pfalz and thus the dignity was restored to the family.

The conversion of the electors to Roman Catholicism led to the expulsion of Huguenots and other Protestants from their territories, many of whom made their way to America, founding New Paltz, New York. In the course of the later seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, the various branches of the Palatinate were left without any legitimate heirs, so that Karl The odor was able to combine the thrones of Jülich-Berg, the Palatinate, and Bavaria after the War of the Bavarian Succession.

Karl Theodor was a great Maecenas, whose orchestra at Mannheim was one of the greatest in Europe. He was a patron of Mozart, who wrote Idomeneo for the opera house in Munich, and of the chemist Benjamin Thompson, later Count Rumford, who fled Massachusetts when the American Revolution broke out and sought refuge in Bavaria.

The Palatinate was administered as part of Bavaria from1777, and did not mint any separate coins after1802. The territories which composed the Palatinate were scattered over central Germany, and now form part of the West German states of Bavaria, Baden, Hesse, and Rheinland-Pfalz. The chief industry is bulk chemicals, from the great BASF factory at Ludwigshafen.

In 1753 Bavaria and Austria concluded a monetary convention, reducing the fineness of the thaler to the point that 20 gulden could be coined from a Mark of fine silver. The most important result was that henceforth the gulden, rather than being worth 2/3 of a thaler, was henceforth worth half a thaler. This Convention standard was soon afterwards adopted by most of the states of southwest Germany, including the Palatinate.

The Electors Palatine and the Saxon Elector acted as Vicars of the Empire after the death of a Holy Roman Emperor and before a new one was elected; the Elector Palatine in the areas of Franconian and Suevic law, the Saxon Elector in the areas where Saxon law applied. Both principalities issued coins commemorating the vicariates. Thus the Elector, Palatine Karl Theodor Actedas, Vicar of the Empire in 1790, after the death of Josef II, and again in 1792, after the early death of Leopold II, and issued coins in those two years. These coins are analogous to the "Sede Vacante" coins of ecclesiastical principalities.

PFALZ-ELECTORAL

(Rhenish Pfalz, Rheinpfalz, Churpfalz, Kurpfalz)
Line of Succession in the Electoral Dignity

Once the electorship was vested in the Palatine line of the Wittelsbachs, it passed by right of succession through the senior male line until the death of Friedrich II in 1556. His nephew Otto Heinrich then received the dignity, but this failed at his death three years later. The branch of the family with the highest seniority aft this time was that of Pfalz-Simmern and it was to it that the electoral office passed. The electorship was lost, as stated above, in 1623 as a result of Friedrich V's actions and not restored until the end of the Thirty Years' War in 1648 as part of the peace settlement. The royal coinage of Friedrich V for Bohemia is listed under that entity. From 1622 until 1648, the Upper Palatinate and part of the Rhenish Palatinate were administered by Bavaria, which struck coins for use in those territories. See Bavaria for listings of those issues. The Simmern line died out in 1685 and the office of elector fell to Pfalz-Neuburg, the rulers of which were also dukes of Jülich-Berg. The coinage issued of these Pfalz-Neuburg rulers are often confused one with the other and it is sometimes difficult to separate issues for Electoral Pfalz from those of Jülich-Berg, particularly because some issues for one principality were produced or at least the dies were made in the mint of the other territory. The fate of extinction befell the Pfalz-Neuburg line in 1742 and all its lands and titles passed to Pfalz-Sulzbach for one generation. The Elector also became duke and elector in Bavaria when the Wittelsbach line in that principality became extinct and the two branches of the family were finally united after a breach of centuries. Once again the electoral dignity passed to another branch of the Palatine family, this time to Pfalz-Birkenfeld in 1799. With the abolition of the Holy Roman Empire by Napoleon in 1806, the electoral college was no longer needed and passed quietly away.

PFALZ-MOSBACH

The line of Pfalz-Mosbach in the Upper Palatinate (Oberpfalz) was established from an early division of the Pfalz lands in 1410. When the line of Pfalz-Neumarkt fell extinct in 1448, Mosbach acquired that territory as well, but its own male line died out in 1499 and reverted back to Electoral Pfalz (Rhenish Palatinate). The old town of Mosbach is located on the Neckar about 18 miles (30 km) east-southeast of Heidelberg, whereas Neumarkt is farther east between Nürnberg and Regensburg.

RULERS
Otto I, 1410-1461

PFALZ-NEUBURG

Pfalz-Neuburg takes its name designation from the town Neuburg on the Danube, 11 miles (18 kilometers) west of Ingolstadt, in the Upper Palatinate (Oberpfalz). It was acquired by Electoral Pfalz from Bavaria-Landshut when the ducal line of that principality became extinct in 1504. Two nephews of the elector ruled in Pfalz-Neuburg jointly, then the survivor continued until he succeeded to the electorate in 1556. In the following year, Wolfgang, the count Palatine (Pfalzgraf) of Pfalz-Zweibrücken purchased Neuburg and Sulzbach. The new line of Pfalz-Neuburg was founded by the eldest son of Wolfgang in the division of 1569. Pfalz-Neuburg acquired Pfalz-Sulzbach in 1604, then divided into Pfalz-Neuburg and Pfalz-Sulzbach in 1614. In 1685, the male line of descent in the Electoral Line from Pfalz-Simmern failed and the electoral dignity passed to Pfalz-Neuburg. See Electoral Pfalz for coinage after 1685.

MINT OFFICIALS' INITIALS

Other than Neuburg itself, mints were opened in four locations during the Kipper Period of the Thirty Years' War. Gundelfingen is a town on the River Brenz close to where it joins the Danube, next to the larger town of Lauingen and about halfway between Ulm and Donauwörth. Höchstädt is a town on the Danube about 12 miles (21km) southwest of Donauwörth. Stockau is a very small village on the River Paar 14 miles (23km) east-southeast of Neuburg and Kallmünz is a village at the junction of the Naab and Vils Rivers, 11 miles (19km) northwest of Regensburg.

PFALZ-SIMMERN

One of the four branches of the Pfalz stemming from the division of 1410, Pfalz-Simmern was itself divided into the Simmern and Zweibrücken lines after one generation in 1459. When the electoral line in the Rhenish Pfalz (Rheinpfalz) came to an end a century later, the electoral dignity passed to the eldest of three brothers in Pfalz-Simmern, while the younger two ruled successively in Simmern. After the last brother died, Pfalz-Simmern was ruled by the electoral line until 1610, at which time the younger brother of the Elector was given the countship there. This final line in Simmern only lasted two generations and reverted to the Elector once again in 1674. However, the Electoral line itself became extinct in 1685 and the Electorate with all its titles passed to Pfalz-Neuburg.

PFALZ-SULZBACH

Originally one of the four lines established in 1569, the first ruler died childless in 1604 and Sulzbach went to the eldest brother in Pfalz-Neuburg. The latter's younger son began a new line in 1614 upon the division of Pfalz-Neuburg. Early in the 18th century, the electoral dignity had passed to Pfalz-Neuburg, but that line also became extinct and all titles, including the electorate, reverted to Pfalz-Sulzbach in 1742 (see Electoral Pfalz for listings after this date).

PFALZ-VELDENZ

This line of Counts Palatine controlled territory centered on Veldenz, overlooking the Mosel River, 20 miles (33km) northeast of Trier. Their principal residence was the castle at Lauterecken on the Glan, some 16 miles (27km) north-northwest of Kaiserslautern. Pfalz-Veldenz was established in 1514 when Pfalz-Zweibrücken-Veldenz was divided into Pfalz-Zweibrücken and Pfalz-Veldenz. However, the younger of the two brothers did not receive full recognition of his rights until 1543. The line of Pfalz-Veldenz fell extinct in 1694, the lands and titles having then been divided by Pfalz-Birkenfeld-Zweibrücken and Pfalz-Sulzbach.

PFALZ-ZWEIBRUCKEN

This branch of Rhinegraves was established upon the division of Pfalz-Simmern in 1459 and was known first as Pfalz-Zweibrücken-Veldenz until 1514, when a separate line at Veldenz was founded. In 1557, Neuburg and Sulzbach were acquired by purchase from Electoral Pfalz. Four brothers divided their inheritance in 1569 and founded new lines at Neuburg, Sulzbach, Birkenfeld and the continued line of Zweibrücken. The male succession failed several times, once in 1661 when the title passed to a cousin of the Pfalz-Landsberg line, then again in 1731. After more than three years of imperial sequestration, Zweibrücken was acquired by Pfalz-Birkenfeld in 1734, which was known henceforth as Pfalz-Birkenfeld-Zweibrücken. The capital of the principality, Zweibrücken, meaning "Two Bridges", is located not far from the border with France, 17 miles (28km) east of Saarbrücken. The mint town of Meisenheim is on the River Glan, 20 miles (33km) east of Zweibrücken.

POMERANIA

(Pommern)

The territory that became Pomerania, stretching along the Baltic coast from the Oder to the Vistula Rivers, was populated by Slavic peoples at least as early as the 5th century. A local ruler named Svantibor took the title of Duke of Pomerania in the late 11th century, thus announcing his claim of independence from Poland. Upon Svantibor's death in 1107, the duchy was divided by his four sons into Inner and Outer Pomerania. In 1181, Pomerania was admitted a constituent state of the Holy Roman Empire. Over the next several centuries, Pomerania underwent several divisions, although that centered on Wolgast emerged as the dominant branch by the early 15th century. Other family members ruled at Barth, Rügenwalde and most importantly, in Stettin, the eventural capital of united Pomerania. Several brothers of the dukes, as well as some dukes themselves, ruled as bishops of Cammin (see) some 20 miles (33km) north-northeast of Stettin.

The line at Wolgast became extinct in 1625 and its territories and titles passed to the Stettin branch, thus united all of Pomerania. The line at Stettin was established in 1569 and lost political power in 1637. The nephew of Bogislaw XIV, Ernst Bogislaw von Croy, was Bishop of Cammin from 1637 until 1650. Upon his death in 1684, the ducal line of almost 700 years came to an end.

Pomerania suffered severely during the Thirty Years' War and when the last duke succeeded to the bishopric of Cammin in 1637, as mentioned above, Sweden annexed the duchy. As part of the terms of the Treaty of Westphalia ending the war, Sweden was forced to pass the eastern part of Pomerania, called Hinter-Pommern, to Brandenburg-Prussia. Sweden did retain Stettin as the capital of its province of West Pomerania and struck a long series of coins specifically for that territory. Swedish control over its portion of Pomerania was continually challenged by the margraves of Brandenburg-Prussia, which succeeded in gaining part of the province in 1679, then all of West Pomerania to the River Peene in 1720. The remaining enclaves of Stralsund, Wolgast and Rügen were awarded to Prussia in 1815.

COUNTERMARKS

Because of the severe financial hardships brought about by the onset of the Thirty Years' War, Duke Philipp Julius issued an edict in 1622 that effectively devalued the smaller circulating denominations of coins in his realm. In order to revalue the coins in circulation at the time, a series of countermarks was devised for use in the principal towns of the duchy. Most of these countermrks are found on the "Doppelschillinge" pieces and they were henceforth valued at 3 Schilling by the Pomeranian standard or one-1/2 Schilling by the standard of Lübeck. Coins of the same denominations from Pomeranian-Stettin and the Bishopric of Cammin were likewise countermarked. The inflation which continued unabated as the war went on forced a second devaluation in Wolgast in March 1623. The local coinage of 2 Schilling value were reduced to equal only 1 Schilling on the Lübeck standard. It is important to note that the following countermarks were authorized and used by the Duchy of Pomerania-Wolgast, not of the individual towns and cities.

PRENZLAU

(Prenzlow)

The town of Prenzlau is in Pomerania, about 28 miles (47km) southwest of Stettin, and appears as a mint for the dukes of Pomerania from the second half of the 12th century. By the mid-13th century, Prenzlau came under the control of the margraves of Brandenburg and was soon producing coins for those rulers. The town had its own coinage in the latter 15th century and again during the Kipper Period of the Thirty Years' War.

PRUSSIA

(Preussen)

The Duchy of Prussia, located along the eastern Baltic coast in what is now Poland and Lithuania, was created out of the remaining territory of the Knights of the Teutonic Order (see). Albrecht, the third son of Margrave Friedrich of Brandenburg-Ansbach (1486-1515), had been elected Grand Master of the Order in 1511. However, Albrecht converted to the Protestant faith in 1525 and, after declaring his vassalage to King Sigismund II of Poland, was created Duke of Prussia on 8 April of that year. The Teutonic Order removed from the Baltic region and set up its seat of operation in Mergentheim, Württemberg, remaining in that place until it was dissolved by Napoleon in 1809. Thus, Prussia became a hereditary domain of the House of Hohenzollern. The second duke, Albrecht Friedrich, only ruled effectively until 1578 and the duchy was administered by other members of the family for the rest of the 16th century. Albrecht Friedrich died in 1618 and the duchy was united with the Electorate/Margraviate of Brandenburg to become Brandenburg-Prussia (see). His widow was Maria Eleonore of Cleves and their marriage was the basis for the claims of Brandenburg on her family's domains in the Rhineland (see Cleves, Jülich-Berg, etc.). The former duchy of Prussia, with its capital of Königsberg, became the province of East Prussia (Ostpreussen).

KINGDOM

The Elector and Margrave of Brandenburg-Prussia, Friedrich III (1688-1713) offered his support to the Austrian Habsburgs during the War of the Spanish Succession. In exchange, Friedrich was permitted to assume the title "King in Prussia" in 1701 and ruled from that year as Friedrich I. Prussia built itself up as one of the major military powers of Europe during the 18th century, despite its size and mostly rural population. Brandenburg-Prussia had been adroitly acquiring territories and significant increases in the number of inhabitants all during the 17th century, especially in the technologically advanced Rhineland. Her far-flung territories gave Prussia a wide operating base and a large and steady income flowed into the state treasury.

Friedrich II the Great (1740-1786) built upon his predecessors' advances and began his reign by wresting much of Silesia away from Austria. Friedrich II was handed a setback during the Seven Years' War (1756-1763) when Russia, under Tsarina Elisabeth I Petrovna, occupied the eastern Prussian territories from 1758 until 1762. A short-lived, but extensive series of coins were struck in Elisabeth's name during those years. As a result of the second partitioning of Poland in 1793, Prussia received the region between East and West Prussia designated the province of South Prussia. A number of small denomination copper coins were struck for this territory for several years late in the 18th century.

Prussia suffered greatly at the hands of Napoleon in the early 19th century, but was among the victorious allies who shared in the spoils of his defeats in 1814 and 1815. Prussia industrialized during the 19th century and added considerably to its territory after wars with Denmark and Austria in 1864 and 1866. The victory over France in the war of 1870-71 resulted in the annexation of Alsace and Lorraine, but even more importantly, it precipitated the creation of the German Empire, with Prussia leading the way. King Wilhelm I became Kaiser (Emperor) Wilhelm I of a united Germany. Defeat in World War I ended the empire and monarchy in Germany. Today, Prussia is not even part of the modern, unified country of Germany.

REFORM COINAGE

A series of counterfeit Prussian 5, 10 and 20 Mark gold pieces all dated 1887A were being marketed in the early 1970's. They were created by a dentist in Bonn, West Germany and the previously unknown date listed above aroused the curiousity of the numismatic community and eventually exposed the scam.

QUEDLINBURG

The small provincial town of Quedlinburg, 8 miles (13km) south-southeast of Halberstadt and slightly north of the Harz Mountains, was founded in 922. The town itself had its own coinage during the middle of the 17th century, but most of the local coinage was produced in and for the abbey. Near the village in 966, Emperor Otto I the Great (962-73) founded an abbey primarily for princesses of his imperial Saxon family. Otto I's grandson, Otto III (983-1002), established an imperial mint in the town and gave the abbesses the right to strike their own coinage at about the same time. Many of the abbesses were members of the House of Saxony or from noble families closely associated with it. When the Electorate and Duchy of Saxony itself became officially Protestant during the Reformation, Quedlinburg followed the same path in 1539. The coinage of the abbesses came to an end in 1697 when Elector Friedrich August I of Saxony (1694-1733) sold his rights over Quedlinburg to Brandenburg-Prussia in order to become King of Poland. A brief and scarce issue of a few types occurred in 1759, but otherwise the abbesses had only their 40-square mile (65-square km) territory to administer. Even this was secularized and annexed by Prussia in 1803.

RANTZAU

(Ranzau)

The small county of Rantzau was situated in Holstein and its seat was the castle of Breitenburg, located just a few miles south of Itzehoe and ten miles (17km) north-northeast from Glückstadt on the Elbe River. The ruling family of Rantzau is mentioned in sources as early as 1362, which refer back to a certain Schalko Rantzau who was Burggraf of Leisnig in Saxony in 1283. Meanwhile, the rule of Count Adolf II of Holstein (1128-64) saw the beginnings of a Saxon colonization of his territories. It seems that some members of the Rantzau family relocated to that region during the following century or two. Johann Rantzau (1492-1565) built the castle of Breitenburg, the foundation stone of which bears the date 1501. His great-grandson, Christian, was granted the title of count and the mint right by Emperor Ferdinand III in 1650. The line of counts became extinct in 1734, but other branches of the family continued in widely separate territories – Leisnig, Bohemia, Mecklenburg, Prussia, Hannover, Württemberg, Oldenburg, Denmark and the Netherlands. Breitenburg passed in marriage to Kastell-Rüdenhausen and eventually back to the Rantzau-Ahrensburg branch of the family.

RAPPOLTSTEIN

This small lordship in Alsace, 7 miles (12 km), north-northwest of Colmar, the rulers of which traced their descent back to the late 12th century. It was a member of the Rappen Monetary Union (Rappenmünzbund) from about 1387, but no coins issued by Rappoltstein from this period are extant. A single issue from the 16th century is all that is numismatically known about Rappoltstein as the line became extinct in 1673. Its lands and titles passed by marriage to Pfalz-Birkenfeld.

RATZEBURG

Located in northern Germany, 12 miles (20 km) south--southeast of Lubeck, Ratzeburg became the seat of a bishopric about the middle of the 12th century. The first bishop was installed in 1158, but it was not until after the conversion of the see to Protestantism in 1566 that coins were struck there. At the conclusion of the Thirty Years' War in 1648, the bishopric was erected into a secular entity and annexed to Mecklenburg-Schwerin. Thus, the bishopric followed the fate of the medieval countship of Ratzeburg, which had been absorbed by Mecklenburg in 1216. Special coins were struck for the principality of Ratzeburg in the 1670s.

RAVENSBERG

A countship in Westphalia surrounded by the bishoprics of Minden on the northeast, Osnabruck on the northwest, Munster on the west, the lordships of Rheda and Rechenberg and the countship of Rietberg on the southwest, and the countship of Lippe on the southeast. The dynasty of rulers emerged in the late 11th century. The countship of Berg was obtained through marriage in the early 14th century, then Ravensberg itself passed in marriage to the duchy of Julich later in the same century. In the first part of the 16th century, these territories were joined to the duchy of Cleveland the county of Mark by marriage. The coinage of each of these principalities has been listed elsewhere. When the last ruler of Julich-Cleve-Berg-Mark-Ravensberg died without heir in 1609, it set off the greatest controversy of the age and was one of the disputes leading to the general conflagration known as the Thirty Years' War (1618-1648).Brandenburg-Prussia and Pfalz-Neuburg laid claim to Ravensberg and the two struck a joint coinage for the countship from 1609 until 1614. Brandenburg controlled the countship from 1614 to 1623, striking coins for the territory it regarded as its own. However, from 1623 to 1647, while Brandenburg was occupied with the war against the Empire farther to the east, Pfalz-Neuburg maintained a presence in Ravensberg. Beginning in 1647, Brandenburg obtained permanent control of Ravensberg and struck a separate coinage for the countship until 1667. The chief mint of Ravensberg was Bielefeld.

RAVENSBURG

(Ravenspurg)

Not to be confused with Ravensberg in Westphalia, Ravensburg is located some 13 miles (22 kilometers) north of Lake Constance in lower Swabia. The earliest structures of the city fortifications date from about 750. The city takes its name from the old German personal name Ravan, that is Rabe in modern German, meaning raven or crow, but who this actually refers to is lost to history. By the middle of the 11th century, Ravensburg was a growing town and received the right to hold markets early in the 12th century. Although Ravensburg is mentioned as the site of an imperial mint in the 12th century, then as a mint for the bishops of Constance early in the next century, it did not receive the mint right for municipal coinage until the 14th century. The first city coinages known date from the later 1300s. Ravensburg had been elevated to the rank of an imperial city in 1276. From the inception of its coinage until the early 18th century, Ravensburg produced intermittent issue of coins. The city also had a short-lived joint coinage with Ulm and Überlingen in the early 16th century (see the latter for these). During the Napoleonic Wars, Ravensburg was annexed by Bavaria in 1803 and transferred to Württemberg in 1810.

REGENSBURG

The site of Regensburg was settled before the arrival of the Romans, who called the place Ratisbona. After the establishment of a bishopric there in the 5th century, the town was also the chief residence of the early dukes of Bavaria. From the 10th century through the early 13th century, Regensburg contained a mint which produced coins for the dukes and bishops. Regensburg was elevated to a free imperial city in 1180 and obtained the mint right in 1230. A long series of issues dating from 1508 and continuing into the early 19th century ensued.

Regensburg was the site of the Imperial Diet (Reichstag) or Parliament, which met continuously in the Reichssaal of the city hall from 1663 until 1806, when Napoleon dissolved the Holy Roman Empire. The opening of each year's session, attended by the emperor in person, all the secular princes and ecclesiastic rulers of the empire, was a source of great pride and prestige for the city. However, Regensburg lost its independence and was handed over to the bishop in 1803. It came into the possession of Bavaria, along with the bishopric, in 1810.

BISHOPRIC

The town of Regensburg, located on the Danube River in Bavaria about 35 miles (57km) northeast of Ingolstadt, became the seat of a bishopric in 470. The first coins of the bishops were joint issues with the dukes of Bavaria from the mid-10th century. In the 11th century, independent episcopal coinage made its appearance. Most of the bishops were members of the local Bavarian nobility. Karl Theodor von Dalberg, the last one with territorial control transferred those lands to Bavaria in 1810, having been raised to the rank of archbishop in 1805. He was given Frankfurt am Main in exchange by Napoleon, who made him a grand duke as well. When Napoleon lost his empire, the bishop was left with only his ecclesiastic title as archbishop of Regensburg.

FREE CITY

The site of Regensburg was settled before the arrival of the Romans, who called the place Ratisbona. After the establishment of a bishopric there in the 5th century, the town was also the chief residence of the early dukes of Bavaria. From the 10th century through the early 13th century, Regensburg contained a mint which produced coins for the dukes and bishops. Regensburg was elevated to a free imperial city in 1180 and obtained the mint right in 1230. A long series of issues dating from 1508 and continuing into the early 19th century ensued.

Regensburg was the site of the Imperial Diet (Reichstag) or Parliament, which met continuously in the Reichssaal of the city hall from 1663 until 1806, when Napoleon dissolved the Holy Roman Empire. The opening of each year's session, attended by the emperor in person, all the secular princes and ecclesiastic rulers of the empire, was a source of great pride and prestige for the city. However, Regensburg lost its independence and was handed over to the bishop in 1803. It came into the possession of Bavaria, along with the bishopric, in 1810.

REGENSTEIN

(Reinstein)

The counts of Regenstein trace their line of descent from the younger branch of the counts of Blankenburg from the early 13th century. The seat of power for the early counts was the castle of Regenstein, 12 miles (20km) southwest of the city of Halberstadt. When the counts of Blankenburg became extinct about 1370, those lands and titles passed to Regenstein. The last count of the line died in 1599 and the twin counties were divided by Brunswick and the bishopric of Halberstadt. There followed a succession of rulers until Brunswick and Brandenburg, which had received Halberstadt as part of the settlement stemming from the Peace of Westphalia, divided the two counties between them. Brandenburg (q.v.) subsequently struck coins in and for Regenstein.

REICHENAU

The monastery of Reichenau was founded in 724 on an island in the far western part of the Bodensee (Lake Constance). The abbots were striking coins as early as the 11th century, but the output of their mint at Radolfzell was never large and dwindled to a trickle over the centuries. The last coins of Reichenau were struck up to the beginning of the 16th century. The monastery was annexed by the bishopric of Constance in 1548.

REUSS

The Reuss family, whose lands were located in Thuringia, was founded c. 1035. By the end of the 12th century, the custom of naming all males in the ruling house Heinrich had been established. The Elder Line modified this strange practice in the late 17th century to numbering all males from 1 to 100, then beginning over again. The Younger Line, meanwhile, decided to start the numbering of Heinrichs with the first male born in each century. Greiz was founded in1303. Upper and Lower Greiz lines were founded in 1535 and the territories were divided until 1768. In 1778 the ruler was made a prince of the Holy Roman Empire. The principality endured until 1918.

REUSS-OBERGREIZ

The other branch of the division of 1635, Obergreiz went through a number of consolidations and further divisions. Upon the extinction of the Ruess-Untergreiz line in 1768, the latter passed to Reuss-Obergreiz and this line continued on into the 20th century, obtaining the rank of count back in 1673 and that of prince in 1778.

REUSS-SCHLEIZ

Originally part of the holdings of Reuss-Gera, Schleiz was ruled separately on and off during the first half of the 16th century. When the Gera line died out in 1550, Schleiz passed to Obergreiz. Schleiz was reintegrated into a new line of Gera and a separate countship at Schleiz was founded in 1635, only to last one generation. At its extinction in 1666, Schleiz passed to Reuss-Saalburg which thereafter took the name of Reuss-Schleiz.

RHEINE

(Reine)

Located on the River Ems in Westphalia about 25 miles (42km) west of Osnabrück and 24 miles (39km) northwest of Münster, the town of Rheine received municipal rights from the bishop of the latter city in 1327. The town leaders petitioned Ernst of Bavaria, Administrator of Münster in the late 16th century for permission to issue minor coinage. The request was granted several years later and coins were produced from about 1602 until 1609.

TOWN ARMS

Shield with horizontal band across middle in which are three stars in line.

RIETBERG

The counts of Rietberg held lands along the River Ems in Westphalia. Rietberg castle and town are located on the river about 15 miles (25 km) west-northwest of Paderborn. The line of Rietberg counts was established by Heinrich II (1185-1207), the younger brother of Count Gottfried II of Arnsberg (1185-1235). The line in Rietberg had the misfortune to become extinct in the male line more than once. When Konrad IV died in 1439, he was succeeded by his grandson through his daughter. In the mid-16th century, Johann II left only two daughters. Irmgard married first Erich von Hoya, second Simon von Lippe, who ruled Rietberg briefly after his wife died in 1583. Meanwhile, Walburg had married Enno III von Ostfriesland and their daughter Sabina Katharina eventually married her uncle, Johann III von Ostfriesland. Johann III ruled Rietberg and their son was the first of a new line of counts there. When that line became extinct as well in 1690, Rietberg passed in marriage to the counts of Kaunitz. The countship was raised to a principality in 1764 and was mediatized in 1807, passing to Westphalia thereafter.

ROSTOCK

The town of Rostock is first mentioned in 1030 and was the seat of a lordship of the same name in the 13th century. It is located just a few miles inland from where the Warnow River enters the Baltic Sea and was an important trading center from earliest times. Although Rostock was usually under some control by the Mecklenburg dukes, it functioned somewhat as a free city, gaining a municipal charter as early as 1218. The city obtained control of its own coinage in 1323 and received the mint right unconditionally in 1361. From 1381, Rostock was a member of the Wendischen Münzverein (Wendish Monetary Union) and joined the Hanseatic League not long afterwards. The city coinage was struck from the 14th century until 1864.

ROTHENBURG

A city located in Bavaria on the Tauber River southeast of Wurzburg. Population: 11,882. Exports include soap and textiles.

Nobles of Rothenburg, whose castle lay in the Harz Mountains, were the cadet line of the counts of Beichlingen. Founded by Friedrich IV (1252-1313) the city became an imperial city in 1274 and reached the height of its prosperity at the end of the 14th century.

ROTTWEIL

FREE CITY

The city of Rottweil is located on the upper Neckar River, northwest of the Swabian Alps and about 32 miles (53km) southsouthwest of Tübingen. The place was first mentioned in records as early as 771 and became an established market town from about 1140. During the third quarter of the 12th century, bracteates with the eagle arms of the town were struck in Rottweil. Subsequent issues appeared in the 13th century prior to its elevation to the status of a Free City of the Empire in 1268. The earliest seal with the eagle city arms is known from 1280. The first mint right was granted by the Count of Zähringen in 1218, but the imperial concession was made in 1285. A new mint privilege was granted by Emperor Maximilian I in 1512, although some coins had been struck in and for the city prior to that date. Only a few issues were struck during the 16th century and a few more were issued by the city in the early period of the Thirty Years' War. Records show that the last coins minted in Rottweil were Kreuzers in the year 1701, but none are known to exist. The city lost its free status during the Napoleonic Wars and in 1803, Rottweil was absorbed by Württemberg.

SAINT ALBAN

The priory of Saint Alban is located some 27 miles (45 kilometers southwest of Mainz and was controlled by the archbishops of that city. Emperor Maximilian I granted the priors the right to mint coins in 1518, but that right seems only to have been exercised twice in the 16th century and again during the 18th century.

SALM

The earliest rulers of this county, with widely scattered territories in the border region of present-day Germany, France and Belgium, descended from the counts of Luxembourg in the second half of the 11th century. The patrimony was divided between two succeeding sons about 1130-35. Lower Salm was located in the Ardenne region of France and became extinct in 1416 with the death of Heinrich VI. It passed by marriage to the lord of Reifferscheidt who in turn established the line of Salm-Reifferscheidt in 1455. The other division of old Salm was Upper Salm and was located in the Vosges to the southwest of Strassburg. This line underwent several divisions, one of which died out and passed to Lorraine in 1503. Another branch subdivided and half passed to as on who left the area and established himself as progenitor of the Salm-Neuburg line in Austria. The remaining half of Salm went to the older son and was inherited through marriage upon his death in 1475 by a ruler styled Wild and Rhinegrave. This latter individual was well-established in lands which stretched along the Rhine between Trier and Mainz. Thus, the early modern lines of Salm and its subdivisions in Germany came into being. The old castle of Salm, seat of the earliest counts, is located southwest of Strassburg, but the dynastic name was transferred to the Rhineland counts, who became from that point on, the Wild- and Rhinegraves of Salm. Two main lines were founded in 1499.

ARMS
Salm - 2 fish (salmon) standing on tails
Rhinegraves - lion with double tail
Wildgraves - crowned lion
Kyrburg - 3 lions, 2 above 1

SALM-DHAUN

(Salm-Daun)

The seat of this branch was at Dhaun (Daun), about 37 miles (62 km) east of Trier, near Kirn an der Nahe. It was further divided in 1561 into three lines: Salm-Neuweiler, Salm-Dhaun and Salm-Grumbach. Salm-Dhaun has a final division in 1697 into Salm-Dhaun and Salm-Puttlingen. The last count died and Puttlingen passed by marriage to Lowenstein-Wertheim-Rochefort in 1750.

SALM-GRUMBACH

Located just to the west of Lauterecken on the River Glan and 11 miles (19 kilometers) south of Dhaun, Grumbach was one result of the 1561 division of Salm-Dhaun. A branch line was founded in 1668 at Rheingrafenstein (Grehweiler), but it became extinct in the early 19th century. Descendants of the Salm-Grumbach line continued well into the 20th century, although the lands were mediatized in 1806.

SALM-KYRBURG

Founded in 1499, this branch took its name from Kyrburg Castle, the ruins of which are located three miles (5 km) west-southwest of Dhaun. A further subdivision was made in 1607, resulting in the lines of Salm-Kyrburg, Salm-Mörchingen and Salm-Tronecken, the latter lasting only one generation. The main line became extinct in 1681and fell to S-Mörchingen, which in turn ended in the male line in 1688. All Salm-Kyrburg lands and titles then reverted to Salm-Salm. After several subdivisions of that senior branch, a new line of Salm-Kyrburg was established from Salm-Neuweiler-Lenze in 1738. The count was raised to the rank of Prince of the Empire in 1742. All territories of the family were mediatized in 1806, but the Salm-Kyrburg line has survived down to modern times.

SALM-SALM

This branch resulted from a division of Salm-Neuweiler in 1608. The count was given the rank of Prince of the Empire in 1623. His grandson inherited the defunct Salm-Kyrburg lands and titles in 1688, but the main line became extinct as well in 1738. The lands and titles then reverted to Salm-Neuweiler. The latter took on the name as the new Salm-Salm line, sold Neuweiler to France in 1751 and continued past mediatization in 1806 and down to the present day.

SALZWEDEL

The old lordship of this name was centered on the town of Salzwedel, 32 miles (54 km) northwest of Stendal and twice that distance from Old Brandenburg city. The line of lords became extinct in 1261 and the territory fell to the margraves of Brandenburg. Salzwedel had a local coinage in the 15th century, but mainly functioned as a mint for the margraves. Kipper coinage was reported in the state archives to have been struck during the early phase of the Thirty Years' War, but noe are known.

SANKT BLASIEN

The Benedictine abbey of Sankt Blasien, located in the Black Forest, 18 miles (30 kilometers) southeast of Freiburg im Breisgau, was founded in the 9th century. It is not to be confused with the monastery of St. Blasien in Northeim, which issued coins in the 12-13th centuries. In 1694, Abbot Roman had several coins struck to pay the workers of the iron furnace at Guttenberg. These are the only issues known of the place.

SAXONY

(Sachsen)

From about the time of Charlemagne, the term Saxony covered most of what is the northwestern part of modern day Germany. It roughly covered the area between the River Ems, the North Sea, the Eider and Elbe Rivers, extending to the southern slopes of the Harz Mountains, bordering Franconia, but not as far as the Rhine. The early Saxon tribes were pagans who, upon conquest by the Franks, became the nucleus of a buffer state between that empire and the heathen Slav peoples to the east.

The first Margrave of Saxony was Ludolf, named in 850 to defend the frontier, and recognized as founder of the Liudolfinger dynasty. His grandson acquired Thuringia (Thüringen) in 908 and was raised to the rank of duke in 911. The dynasty furnished the Saxon line of German kings and emperors beginning with Heinrich I the Fowler in 919 and up to Heinrich II, who died in 1024. A relative of the dynasty was delegated to rule Saxony and founded the Billung dynasty of dukes in 961. In 1260, Saxony was divided into Saxe-Lauenburg (Northern or Lower Saxony, which see) and Saxe-Wittenberg, also known as Upper Saxony, the southern part of the territory ruled by the Billungers.

SAXE-WITTENBERG

(Sachsen-Wittenberg)

Saxe-Wittenberg was founded by the younger son of Albrecht I when Saxony was divided into Saxe-Lauenburg and Saxe-Wittenberg in 1260. The duke was raised to the electoral dignity by the Golden Bull of 1356 (see main introduction). When the line fell extinct in 1422, the electorate of Saxony passed to the Margrave of Meissen. The margraves had inherited the Landgraviate of Thuringia (Thüringen) in the late 13th century and it was subsequently ruled by the same margrave who had obtained Saxe-Wittenberg in 1422. The sons of Friedrich II ruled jointly until 1485, then divided Saxony, establishing the Ernestine and Albertine lines of the family. See Saxony-Ernestine and Saxony-Albertine lines for the period after 1485.
