SAXONY-ALBERTINE

(Sachsen-Albertinische Linie)

The younger of the two branches of the Billung dynasty, which ruled in Upper Saxony and Meissen, this line founded by Friedrich II's son, Albrecht, in 1485, first ruled in Meissen as dukes of Saxony. As a result of the conflict between Johann Friedrich I and Emperor Karl V (see Ernestine Line), the Albertine Line acquired the electoral dignity in 1547. The elector also became King of Poland in 1696 and permanently in 1709. As a result of the Napoleonic Wars (1792-1815), the elector was made King of Saxony in 1806, but lost half his territory to Prussia in 1813. The last king was forced to abdicate at the end of World War I.

The early dukes issued coinage jointly with members of the Ernestine Line prior to 1547 and their issues are listed under that section.

SAXE-ZEITZ-NAUMBURG

(Sachsen-Zeitz-Naumburg)

Saxe-Zeitz was created at the same time as Saxe-Weissenfels for the fourth son of the elector Johann Georg I. Moritz, was also administrator of the bishopric of Naumburg-Zeitz and a part of Henneberg. At the death of his son Moritz-Wilhelm, a Catholic, in 1718, this line became extinct and reverted to the electoral line.

SAXE-BARBY

(Sachsen-Barby)

When the line of counts of Barby (q.v.) became extinct in 1659, the lands of that countship fell to Electoral Saxony. In 1680, a separate line of Saxe-Barby was established by a son of the duke of Saxe-Weissenfels. It was short-lived, however, and reverted to Saxe-Weissenfels in 1739. The latter also became extinct in 1746 and Barby was integrated from that time into the kingdom of Saxony.

SAXONY-ERNESTINE

(Sachsen-Ernestinische Linie)

Upon the partition of Saxony in 1485, Ernst the elder son of Friedrich II, received Saxe-Wittenberg and Thuringia (Thüringen), as well as the electoral title. Ernst's second son, Friedrich III, became a champion of the Protestant Reformation and passed his commitment to that cause on to his son, Johann Friedrich I. During the ensuing religious wars, Johann Friedrich I was captured in a battle against Emperor Karl V. While imprisoned, he was forced to cede the electorate and Saxe-Wittenberg to his second cousin, Moritz, of the Albertine Line (see). This Capitulation of Wittenberg, as it is known, took place in 1547 and, from that time onwards, the Ernestine rulers held only the rank of Dukes of Saxony in Thuringia. Johann Friedrich I's sons ruled jointly in his place until he was released in 1552. He only lived until 1554 and his sons ruled jointly again until 1565, when they divided their territory into the houses of Saxe-Old-Gotha and Saxe-Old-Weimar (see each). Some coins were struck by the Ernestine rulers jointly with the Albertine dukes. Joint issues also exist in the names of Johann Friedrich I and Philipp I von Hessen, sometimes with Moritz of the Albertine Line as well, for the occupation of Brunswick on behalf of the Schmalkalder League, 1542-1547.

SAXE-OLD-GOTHA

(Sachsen-Alt-Gotha)

In the aftermath of the religious struggles of the first half of the 16th century, Ernestine Saxony was ruled jointly, divided, and ruled jointly again in relentless succession. The sons of Johann Friedrich I effected a division of the domains in 1565. When the older brother was imprisoned two years later, Gotha reverted to Saxe-Old Weimar. Gotha was ceded in 1572 by Weimar to the Coburg branch of the family, but reverted to the former again in 1638. Upon its extinction in the latter year, Gotha fell to Weimar a third time, from which a new Gotha line was established in 1640.

SAXE-OLD-WEIMAR

(Sachsen-Alt Weimar)

After the loss of the electoral dignity by Johann Friedrich I in 1547 (see Saxony-Ernestine Line) and his death in 1554, his sons ruled jointly in Wittenberg and Thuringia (Thüringen) until 1565. Weimar and Altenburg were separated and ruled by Johann Friedrich's second son, who also appropriated Gotha in 1567. In 1573, the lines of Saxe-Old-Altenburg and Saxe-Middle-Weimar were founded, but the two sons ruled together and issued a series of joint coinages.

RULERS
Johann Wilhelm, 1565-73
Friedrich Wilhelm I of Altenburg, 1573-1602

SAXE-OLD-ALTENBURG

(Sachsen-Alt-Altenburg)

This early division of Saxe-Old-Weimar was effectively created in 1573 when the two sons of Johann Wilhelm agreed on joint rule of their territories while founding lines which eventually became separately administered entities. For the joint coinage up to 1602, see Saxe-Old-Weimar. In 1672, the Saxe-Old-Altenburg line became extinct and most of the territory and titles were inherited by Saxe-New-Gotha (see). In 1826, the Duke of Saxe-Hildburghausen received Altenburg in exchange for Hildburghausen and established the line of Saxe-(New)-Altenburg (which see).

RULERS

Friedrich Wilhelm I, 1573-1602
Johann Philipp I, 1602-1639
Friedrich VIII, 1602-1625
Johann Wilhelm IV, 1602-1632
Friedrich Wilhelm II, 1603-1639 (joint rule); 1639-1669 (alone)
Friedrich Wilhelm III, 1669-1672
Note: Joint coinages were issued by the four brothers 1603-1625, three brothers 1626-1632, and two brothers 1633-1639.

MINT OFFICIALS

SAXE-WEIMAR

(Sachsen-Neu-Weimar)

Founded from Saxe-Middle-Weimar in 1640, the division ended the joint rule of the duchy begun by all eight sons of Johann III. In 1662, the four sons of Wilhelm IV divided their inheritance into the lines of Saxe-(New)-Weimar, Saxe-Eisenach, Saxe-Marksuhl and Saxe-Jena. When the line in Eisenach became extinct in 1741, that territory and titles reverted to Weimar, which became known from that time on as Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach

SAXE-EISENACH

(Sachsen-Eisenach)

One of the Ernestine Saxon duchies in Thuringia (Thüringen), Saxe-Eisenach was first ruled separately by one of eight brothers beginning in 1640. It reverted back to Saxe-Middle-Weimar in 1644, but a new line was established by the second son of Duke Wilhelm IV as Saxe-(New)-Weimar in 1622. This second line became extinct very shortly thereafter and Eisenach passed to Wilhelm IV's third son in 1671. Sayn-Altenkirchen (q.v.) was added to the duke's possessions through marriage in 1686. Again, the line passed out of existence and Eisenach was returned to Saxe-Weimar in 1741. See Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach for subsequent coinages.

SAXE-WEIMAR-EISENACH

(Sachsen-Weimar-Eisenach)

When the death of the duke of Saxe-Eisenach in 1741 heralded the extinction of that line, its possessions reverted to Saxe-Weimar, which henceforth was known as Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach. Because of the strong role played by the duke during the Napoleonic Wars, Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach was raised to the rank of a grand duchy in 1814 and granted the territory of Neustadt, taken from Saxony. The last grand duke abdicated at the end of World War I.

SAXE-GOTHA-ALTENBURG

(Sachsen-Gotha-Altenburg)

When the seven sons of Ernst the Pious of Saxe-New-Gotha divided the lands of their father in 1680, the eldest established the line of Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg. The line became extinct in 1825 and the following year witnessed the division of the territory which resulted in a general reorganization of the Thuringian duchies. Altenburg itself was inherited by the duke of Saxe-Hildburghausen, who transferred Hildburghausen to Saxe-Meiningen and became the founder of a new line of Saxe-Altenburg. Saxe-Meiningen also received Saalfeld from Saxe-Coburg, which in turn had acquired Gotha as part of the proceedings. The line of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha was established as a result. See under each of the foregoing regarding developments after the realignment of 1826. For a short period of time, from 1688 to 1692, the duke leased the abbey of Walkenried from Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel and struck a series of coins for that district.

SAXE-COBURG

Coburg, a town and county in southern Thüringia – now belonging to Bavaria - came to the Wettins thru a marriage in the fourteenth century. In the division of the Saxon territories in 1485 it went to the Ernestine branch. It was apparently first a separate duchy under Johann Ernst I (1542-1553), then passed into the Old Gotha, Old Altenburg, and finally New Gotha line. In 1680 it was created a separate duchy for Albrecht III, second son of Ernst the Pious. At his death in 1699 there was vehement contention among his surviving brothers, but eventually it was assigned to his youngest brother Johann Ernst VIII of Saalfeld.

SAXE-MEININGEN

(Sachsen-Meiningen)

The duchy of Saxe-Meiningen was located in Thuringia, sandwiched between Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach on the west and north and the enclave of Schmalkalden belonging to Hesse-Cassel on the east. It was founded upon the division of the Ernestine line in Saxe-Gotha in 1680. In 1735, due to an exchange of some territory, the duchy became known as Saxe-Coburg-Meiningen. In 1826, Saxe-Coburg-Gotha assigned Saalfeld to Saxe-Meiningen. The duchy came under the strong influence of Prussia from 1866, when Bernhard II was forced to abdicate because of his support of Austria. The monarchy ended with the defeat of Germany in 1918.

SAXE-SAALFELD

(Sachsen-Saalfeld)

Saalfeld was purchased by Saxony from Meissen-Thuringia in 1389. As a branch of the Ernestine line, it was created as a duchy for Johann Ernst VIII, 7th son of Ernst the Pious of Saxe-Gotha. Coburg was added to the holdings in 1735 and thereafter the dukes took the name of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld. Coinage after that date is listed under the latter entity.

SAXE-COBURG-GOTHA

(Sachsen-Coburg-Gotha)

Upon the extinction of the ducal line in Saxe-Gotha-Altenburg in 1826, Gotha was assigned to Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld and Saxe-Meiningen received Saalfeld. The resulting duchy became called Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. Albert, the son of Ernst I and younger brother of Ernst II, married Queen Victoria of Great Britain and the British royal dynastic name was that of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. Their son, Alfred was made the Duke of Edinburgh and succeeded his uncle, Ernst II, as Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. Alfred's older brother, Eduard Albert, followed their mother as King Edward VII (1901-1910). The last duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha was Alfred's son, Karl Eduard, forced to abdicate in 1918 as a result of World War I, which was fought in part against his cousin, King George V.

SAYN

COUNTSHIP

The counts of Sayn trace their beginnings to the elder son of Emmerich, Count of Dietz (ca. 1073-1139). The first of his line, Eberhard I (1139-76) centered his domains on the castle of Sayn, north of and across the Rhine several miles from Coblenz. The counts controlled lands in the Westerwald to the north and northwest of their castle. A number of significant acquisitions of lands and titles took place through marriage during the late 13th and 14th centuries. The branch of Homburg-Vallendar acquired the countship of Wittgenstein about the middle of the 14th century, then the last of the old main line of Sayn-Sayn, Anna Elisabeth, married a son of the Sayn-Wittgenstein branch in 1608. That branch had already been subdivided in 1605 into Sayn-Wittgenstein-Sayn, Sayn-Wittgenstein-Wittgenstein-Berleburg.

SAYN-WITTGENSTEIN

The countship of Wittgenstein was obtained through marriage by Sayn-Homburg-Vallendar about 1359. The castle of Wittgenstein is located on the River Lahn 18 miles (29 kilometers) northwest of Marburg. In 1605, the sons of Ludwig I divided their patrimony and established the lines of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Sayn, Sayn-Wittgenstein-Wittgenstein and Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg. No coins are known for Sayn-Wittgenstein during the 16th century, but a single silver token was issued in 1577 to celebrate the 10-year anniversary of Ludwig I's marriage to Elisabeth, Countess of Solms-Laubach.

SAYN-WITTGENSTEIN-BERLEBURG

(Sayn-Berleberg)

The eldest branch of Sayn-Wittgenstein founded in 1605 was centered on Berleburg in Wittgenstein territory, some 21 miles (35 kilometers) northeast of Siegen. The new entity was further divided into Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg and Sayn-Wittgenstein-Homburg in 1631. The count was raised to the rank of a prince in 1792 and the line lasted well into the 19th century. Another division was made in 1694 into the branches of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg, Sayn-Wittgenstein-Karlsburg and Sayn-Wittgenstein-Ludwigsburg, but the latter two did not issue any coins.

SAYN-WITTGENSTEIN-WITTGENSTEIN

The middle line of Sayn-Wittgenstein was founded in 1605. Count Johann VIII was a chief minister of the Elector of Brandenburg-Prussia during te Thirty Years' War. At the conclusion of the war after the Peace of Westphalia, Johann was given Clettenberg and Lohra in Hohnstein for services. He was also the governor of Minden and had coins struck especially for use in that town. His son was notorious for issuing a wide variety of poor value coinage, including counterfeits, fakes and forgeries until the Elector of Brandenburg was forced to close his mint at Elrich and repossess the Hohnstein territories. In 1804, the count was raised to the rank of prince.

SAYN-WITTGENSTEIN-SAYN

(Sayn-Hachenberg-Altenkirchen)

The eldest son of Ludwig III married Anna Elisabeth, the heiress of the main line of Sayn, and the result was a branch known variously as Sayn-Wittgenstein-Sayn and Sayn-Hachenberg-Altenkirchen. It soon fell extinct in the male line, but the daughters of Ernest divided the title into the lines of Sayn-Hachenberg and Sayn-Altenkirchen. Joint coinage for the death of Ernest's widow and in commemoration of the succeeding rulers who married their daughters was struck in 1670.

SAYN-HACHENBERG

Founded at the end of the Thirty Years' War by the elder daughter of Ernst (1623-32) upon her marriage to Salentin Ernest von Manderscheid. SAYN-ALTENKIRCHEN

The younger daughter of Ernest of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Sayn (1623-32()) founded the line of Sayn-Altenkirchen at the end of the Thirty Years' War, having married Duke Johann Georg I of Saxe-Eisenach (1662-86). When Saxe-Eisenach (see) fell extinct in 1741, Sayn-Altenkirchen passed in marriage to the Margraves of Brandenburg-Ansbach, then to Prussia in 1791 and finally to Nassau in 1803. Altenkirchen is in the Westerwald 16 miles (27 kilometers) north of Sayn.

SCHAUMBURG-HESSEN

Located in northwest Germany, Schaumburg-Hessen was founded in 1640 when Schaumburg-Gehmen was divided between Hesse-Cassel and Lippe-Alverdissen. The acquired territories were renamed Schaumburg-Hessen and Schaumburg-Lippe respectively. Cassel struck coins for Schaumburg-Hessen well into the 19th century. By agreement between the rulers of the two divisions of Schaumburg, who themselves were related by marriage, many of the issues struck by the landgraves of Hesse-Cassel were for use in both Schaumburg-Hessen and Schaumburg-Lippe.

SCHAUMBURG-LIPPE

The tiny countship of Schaumburg-Lippe, with an area of only 131 square miles (218 square kilometers) in northwest Germany, was surrounded by the larger states of Brunswick-Lüneburg-Calenberg, an enclave of Hesse-Cassel, and the bishopric of Minden (part of Brandenburg-Prussia from 1648). It was founded in 1640 when Schaumburg-Gehmen was divided between Hesse-Cassel and Lippe-Alverdissen. The two became known as Schaumburg-Hessen and Schaumburg-Lippe. Philipp II, the youngest son of Count Simon VI of Lippe came into the possession of Alverdissen and Lipperode upon his father's death in 1613. In 1640, he also inherited half of Schaumburg-Bückeburg, becoming the first Count of Schaumburg-Lippe. A separate line of Schaumburg-Alverdissen was established in 1681 and, upon the extinction of the elder line in 1777, the lands and titles devolved onto Alverdissen, becoming the ruling line in the countship. In 1807, the count was raised to the rank of prince and Schaumburg-Lippe was incorporated into the Rhine Confederation. It became a part of the German Confederation in 1815 and joined the North German Confederation in 1866. The principality became a member state in the German Empire in 1871. The last sovereign prince resigned as a result of World War I.

See Schaumburg-Hessen for coinage which also circulated in Schaumburg-Lippe.

SCHAUMBURG-PINNEBERG

(Schauenburg-Pinneberg)

County in northwest Germany. First count in 1030. In 1106 it became part of Holstein, which remained for over 2 centuries. Many churchmen came from this house. Raised to the rank of prince in 1620. Senior line died out in 1622 and title reverted to Holstein-Schauenburg-Gehmen branch, which had been established in 1581. Gehmen itself became extinct in 1640 and Holstein-Schauenburg was divided among various states. Pinneberg was given to Denmark, Bückeburg was split between Hesse-Cassel and Lippe-Alverdissen and renamed Schaumburg-Hessen and Schaumburg-Lippe respectively. Gehmen went to Limburg-Styrum.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN

Christian I, son of Count Dietrich of Oldenburg (1423-40), was elected King of Denmark in 1448. By virtue of his marriage to Hedwig, the last surviving heir of the countship of Holstein-Rendsburg (see Holstein), Christian I became Duke of Schleswig and Count of Holstein in 1459. His status over Holstein was raised to that of duke in 1474 and from that year onwards, the dual duchies of Schleswig-Holstein were ruled by the Danish royal house. In 1533, a separate line for one of Friedrich I's sons was established in Gottorp. Similarly, a son of Christian III was given Sonderburg as his domain in 1559. The Danish kings continued to have coins struck for their remaining portions of Schleswig-Holstein during the next several centuries. Upon the dissolution of the Holy Roman Empire by Napoleon in 1806, Holstein was made a part of Denmark. However, Holstein, without Schleswig, joined the German Confederation following the final defeat of Napoleon in 1815. After Denmark tried to annex Schleswig and Holstein in 1846, she fought a war with Prussia for three years over control of the duchies, but it was inconclusive. In 1863, Denmark declared that Schleswig was part of that country although it had a German majority in the population. A second war was fought between Denmark against Prussia and Austria and Schleswig-Holstein was occupied by the victorious Prussians. The administration of Holstein was given to Austria, while that of Schleswig was obtained by Prussia in 1865. However, Austria was forced to give up Holstein after losing a war with Prussia in 1866. Schleswig-Holstein were controlled by Prussia and became part of the German Empire in 1871. Following World War I, a plebiscite was held in Schleswig and the northern part, with its majority Danish population, was ceded to Denmark in 1920.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN-GOTTORP

The line of Gottorp was established in 1533 as a territorial domain for the youngest son of Friedrich I, King of Denmark and Duke of Schleswig-Holstein. Many members of this line and a cadet line founded in 1702 became bishops of Lübeck (see). Duke Karl Peter Ulrich, whose father, Karl Friedrich, had married Anna of Russia, became Czar Peter III in 1762, but was killed shortly after his accession to the throne. His son, Paul, traded Gottorp to Denmark for Oldenburg in 1773 (see Oldenburg) and ruled Russia as Czar Paul I (1798-1901).

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN-NORBURG

Established upon the division of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg in 1622. The first line became extinct after two generations and passed to Schleswig-Holstein-Plön, from which a second line was begun in 1679. When the Plön branch of the family died out in 1706, Norburg acquired the lands and titles. Schleswig-Holstein-Norburg passed to Denmark in 1761.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN-SONDERBURG

Sonderburg was split away from Schleswig-Holstein in 1559 and created as a separate duchy for a younger son of King Christian III of Denmark. Divisions of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg occurred in 1622 and again in 1627. The first division resulted in the branches of Glücksburg, Norburg and Plön, all of which were acquired by Denmark in the second half of the 18th century.

SCHONAU

The lordship of Schönau was centered on the Lower Rhine north of Aachen. It was ruled from the mid-15th century for several hundred years by the lords of Milendonck, themselves having originated in the mid-12th century. When the male line died out, the titles continued through marriage in the late 13th century into the line of Reifferscheidt-Malberg. After the male line again fell extinct in 1674, a surviving sister transferred ownership to the Lord of Blanche. The son of the latter struck a short-lived illegal minor coinage which was banned by the city council of Aachen in 1756. Schönau was mediatized to Jülich-Berg in 1758 and eventually sold to the Lords of Broich near the end of the 18th century.

SCHWARZBURG

The countship of Schwarzburg had its beginnings in central Thuringia (Thüringen) and the ruling family eventually held numerous small territories from northern to central Thuringia. The earliest rulers known with any historical certainty were counts of Käfernburg in the 12th century. The line was divided into Käfernburg and Schwarzburg in the early 13th century, but when that of Käfernburg became extinct in 1385, most of its territories reverted to Schwarzburg. Several divisions of the countship took place during the next several centuries and at the beginning of the 16th century, there existed the branches of Schwarzburg-Arnstadt, Schwarzburg-Blankenburg and Schwarzburg-Leutenberg. The rulers of the various lines usually struck a joint coinage during the 16th century, but some of the counts issued coins in their own right as well. In 1526, the lines of Schwarzburg-Frankenhausen and Schwarzburg-Sondershausen were established from Schwarzburg-Blankenburg. Frankenhausen only lasted for one generation, but Schwarzburg-Sondershausen was further divided into Schwarzburg-Arnstadt, Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt and Schwarzburg-Sondershausen in 1552 (see separate listings for each of these). The Arnstadt line also failed after a single generation, but was reestablished as a branch of Schwarzburg-Sondershausen in 1642.

SCHWARZBURG-ARNSTADT

The seat of this branch of Schwarzburg is located about 10 miles (16 kilometers) south of Erfurt. The town, castle and surrounding territory were acquired by the counts of Schwarzburg in the early 14th century and a line was soon established separate from Schwarzburg-Blankenburg. The latter fell extinct in the mid-14th century and passed to Arnstadt. Generations later, the lines of Schwarzburg-Sondershausen and Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt were founded and Arnstadt was absorbed by the former, only to reemerge as a separate line in 1642. The last count of Schwarzburg-Arnstadt was raised to the rank of prince in 1709, but died without heirs in 1716.

SCHWARZBURG-RUDOLSTADT

Established upon the division of Schwarzburg-Sondershausen in 1552, the younger main branch of Schwarzburg, centered on the castle and town of Rudolstadt, 17 miles (29 kilometers) south of Weimar, flourished until the end of World War I. The count was raised to the rank of prince in 1711. The three sons of Albrecht VII, the first Count of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, ruled and issued coinage jointly, followed by a long succession of sole rulers descended from the middle son, Ludwig Günther I.

SCHWARZBURG-SONDERSHAUSEN

As the elder main line of Schwarzburg established in 1552, the counts of Schwarzburg-Sondershausen controlled their scattered territories from the castle of Sondershausen in northern Thuringia (Thüringen), 10 miles (16 kilometers) southeast of Nordhausen. Count Christian Wilhelm I was raised to the rank of prince in 1697 and the line descended from him until it finally became extinct in 1909. All titles and territories then passed to Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt.

SCHWARZENBERG

The princes of Schwarzenberg based their land holdings in Franconia after Erkinger I of Stefansberg bought the lordship of Schwarzenberg sometime between 1405 and 1411. He became a member of the Imperial Diet in 1429 and upon his death in 1437, his two sons founded the lines of Schwarzenberg-Stefansberg and Schwarzenberg-Hohenlandsberg. The younger line, which was raised to the rank of count in 1566, became extinct in 1646. Its lands and titles reverted to Stefansberg, which attained the countship in 1599. In 1670, the count of Schwarzenberg was made a prince and, a generation later, the territories of Sulz and Kettgau were added to the family holdings through marriage, followed by Krumau in 1719. Having acquired Gimborn earlier, the prince sold that county to Wallmoden in 1783. Klettgau was sold to Baden in 1813, but not before the principality in Franconia was mediatized to Bavaria when the Holy Roman Empire came to an end in 1806. Members of the family retained their titles and held extensive lands in Bavaria, Austria and Bohemia/Czechoslovakia well into the 20th century. Several princes von Schwarzenberg distinguished themselves in both civil and military service to Austria.

SCHWEIDNITZ

The town of Schweidnitz was the seat of a Silesian duchy from about the year 1290. The line of dukes fell extinct in 1392 and the small principality fell to Bohemia until 1526. It passed along with all Bohemian possessions to the Habsburgs until the Prussian conquest and annexation of large parts of Silesia in the 1740s.

The town itself was founded in the 11th century and obtained civic rights in 1250. The town purchased the mint right from the reigning duke in 1351 and began producing a steady stream of coins until the right was taken away by the imperial court. The town revolted at this usurpation of its prerogatives and the mint right was soon restored. Coinage continued, thereafter, until the Kipper Period of the Thirty Years' War.

SCHWEINFURT

Schweinfurt was a Free City located in Lower Franconia some 27 miles northeast of Würzburg. It was first mentioned in 790, became a Free City in the 13th century. Immediately after becoming free, Schweinfurt was the site of a short-lived royal bracteate mint.

The only Schweinfurt local coinage appeared in 1622, though a 1717 series of Reformation commemoratives may have passed as coins.

In 1803 the town was annexed to Bavaria.

SILESIA

The territory of Silesia was historically located between Bohemia and Poland, but was Germanic in character from an early period. The first ruling dynasty, that of the Piasts, was descended from the Polish royal line and soon had divided Silesia into a number of smaller entities. Silesia proper became a part of the Holy Roman Empire in the 14th century and came under the influence of Bohemia, which began striking coins for that territory. After the mid-14th century, Breslau (see) became the capital and the principal mint of the duchy. In 1526, Silesia, along with Bohemia, came into the possession of the Habsburg imperial family. The Austrian-style coinage of Silesia was struck from that time until 1740, with few gaps, most notably during the Thirty Years' War, when the estates struck a series of emergency coinage. All during the period of Habsburg domination, the various semi-independent small duchies, in all their branches, continued to strike their own coins. The bishops of Breslau and a number of towns and cities also issued coinages in their own names (see under Breslau and the town names).

In the 1740's, Prussia conquered the greater portion of Silesia and established a mint in Breslau which struck coins within the Prussian system from 1743 until 1797 (see under Prussia). Silesia remained a province of Prussia throughout the 18th and 19th centuries, only to be divided and partly awarded to Poland after World War I. Following the Second World War, the rest of Silesia was united with Poland and remains as part of that country up to the present day.
